This from Percival S. Hill, head the American Tobacco Company, means good news.

The recent advance in cotton has produced a wonderfully good effect in the South, has been instrumental in helping the banks liquidate their loans and has changed the whole mental attitude of the South.

Along the same lines, advances in the prices of tobacco are bringing about the same results in localities where tobacco is a dominating agricultural commodity. On good grades of tobacco the prices that are being brought today are considerably higher than they were last year, and they are now from 120 to 200 per cent. higher than they were in 1914. I think information of this kind is constructive in its effects, and in any event, I wanted you to know the facts in the case.

Nothing like solid fact, to encourage the despondent. General talk of "better tone," "hopeful outlook," etc., means little. But "higher prices this year than last, 120 to 200 per cent. above 1914 prices," makes the tobacco grower feel like plowing more acres and trading in his old automobile for a new one.

What has happened to the tobacco industry and to cotton may happen to other agricultural products. Then to steel, and other industries now torpid. The main thing is to keep out foreign competition, destructive to labor and industry here.

Dr. Rathenau, man of genius and of business, giving his time and power to the German Republic, says "the more Germany works, the more others must stop working."

Millions of skilled German mechanics, forced by the peace terms to work on a Chinese labor basis, to pay foreign indemnity, threaten skilled labor and industry everywhere.

But, while sympathizing with the troubles of the new republic, this country must not forget the six letters that spell a solution of the problem: TARIFF.

A New York man is to have monkey glands planted in his body to restore youthful vigor. The doctor's picture is printed, also the face of the poor little sad-eyed thirteen months' old ring-tailed monkey from Brazil. If the transplanted glands work and give to man an extra supply of monkey energy, what of it, what use?

Strange that man feeling old and tired never do their "transplanting" in a public library. A few thoughts from the brains of able men transplanted in an average brain, will work wonders. They bring youth, interest in life, new power, many things worth while, not found in the glands of any monkey. And you only open a book instead of opening and vivisecting a poor monkey, with a right to keep his own glands.

In one city, both baseball teams won the league championship. Two New York teams will play against each other for the national championship. This writer will endeavor to attend and give an unenlightened account of the proceedings. Half a million requests for seats at any price have poured in. Thousands will arrive to see eighteen men throwing, batting and catching a ball, that would not be much interested in the proceedings of the world's greatest scientific association. And that is quite normal and right. We are, as a race, nearer to the animal, depending on agility for its safety, than to the scientist weighing a distant star, or discovering the electron construction of the atom. It is hard to believe now, but one day the half-million will be more interested in the curve of a comet, or the size of the great Nebula in Orion, than in Ruth's batting.

It is a great week for New York, huge city of placid, self-esteeming provincialism. She will have the double baseball championship, and the ring-tailed monkey gland transplantation, both in one week, and her capable taxing authorities value her real estate at more than ten thousand million dollars, not counting vast values held tax free, by fraternal, charitable, religious and other organizations.

And the whole of Manhattan Island was sold by the Indians for stuff worth less than $100.

Foolish Indians? Do not say so. If they had put out $100 at 6 per cent. compound interest, when they made the sale, they would have now more cash than New York is worth.

Moral—Save some money, and invest it safely, compounding and re-compounding. Poverty is slavery, and compound interest is very interesting.

With "Statesmen" and the committee on unemployment asking "how far down can we bring wages?" it is a pleasure to hear some civilized talk from A. Eaton of the big General Electric Company:

"High wages are the most economical thing in industry; workmen should earn a surplus above the mere cost of living, otherwise, no advance toward better civilization."

Better machines, better industrial managers, higher efficiency in labor, new inventions, work done in great economical units should solve the problem. Forever striving to reduce wages is stupid, out of date, harmful to the public interest, worthy of the man that re-

GORDON, TUFTS' AID, TO BE TRIED

Exhume Searles' Body to Solve Death Mystery

AUTOPSY ORDERED OVER RICH RECLUSE

District Attorney Donnell to Open Millionaire's Tomb After Poison Rumors

Lawrence, Oct. 3.—The body of Edward F. Searles, Methuen millionaire recluse, will be taken from its stone crypt and examined, to see if he was poisoned or his death hastened.

This was the statement of S. Howard Donnell, district attorney for Essex County, who today ordered an autopsy to clear up the mysterious details surrounding the "hermit millionaire" of Methuen, following receipt of an anonymous communication intimating the millionaire was hastened to his death.

He said he would go to the very bottom of the case.

STATEMENT BY DONNELL.

The district attorney gave the following statement to a reporter for the Boston American:

"Following a conference with Dr. Victor A. Reed, associate medical examiner for the Lawrence-Methuen-Andover district, I have decided to order an autopsy on the body of the late Edward F. Searles.

"The evidence in my possession at present does not warrant a belief that Mr. Searles met his death through the introduction of poison, but there can be no real objection to an autopsy and it will set at rest all rumors.

"I shall immediately request permission of the Board of Health of Methuen to exhume the body and remove it for the autopsy, and just as soon as arrangements can be completed the autopsy will take place.

District Attorney Donnell pointed out that it would take a couple of days to get the necessary papers through and that another day probably would be required to open the tight-sealed crypt, so that the autopsy could not be expected before Wednesday.

Linked with the sordid mess of Boston's blackmail ring through the muicting of his nephew and heir to the extent of many thousands of dollars, the aged millionaire who fought so tenaciously

POLICE CAPTAIN IS REMOVED

BLACKMAIL FOILED BY RICH MAN

Told Gang He Would Not "Come Across" and Dared Them to Do Their Worst

Boston's blackmailing, whose sensational activities the Boston American continues to expose today, was not always successful in its infamous attempts to "shakedown" prospective victims.

In a number of instances these marked for tribute, although trapped in compromising positions, boldly defied the gang, refused to pay blackmoney and sent the blackmailers cringing to their lairs.

In fact in practically every instance where the quarry had the courage and manhood to stand up and face the ring, challenging them to do their worst, the "victims" escaped persecution.

The members of the gang knew that while in certain cases they might have been successful in court actions, the chances were against them, and the risk did not appeal to their craven souls.

Furthermore there was too much "soft" money to be obtained from wealthy men who shivered with the dread of retribution when confronted with the evidences of moral lapses and who were glad to pay for protection.

LAWYERS TO AID EXPOSE.

One instance of upstanding defiance, in which the "sucker" proved to be a man of mettle by refusing to pay $100,000 demanded as the price of silence, occurred in Essex County, to which the ramifications of the gang extended.

The victim, a man of prominence and wealth, was the client of a well known public official who has assured the Boston American of his support in its revelations of the blackmail operations.

He has offered to take the witness stand if necessary and tell what he knows of the workings of the Blackmail Ring. The Boston American has also received offers of aid from other reputable lawyers, who

Watson Elected President of Council

The deadlock for president of the City Council, between James A. Watson and Daniel W. Lane, was broken this afternoon with the election of Watson by a five to two vote, Watson and Lane not voting. The deadlock has existed since the beginning of the year.

The vote was as follows:

For Watson — Councilor Brickley, Donohue, Ford, McLaughlin and Moriarty.

For Lane—Collins and Hagan.

TOLSTOY'S FRIEND AGAIN IN COURT

Another chapter in the life of Carl Michelson, soldier of fortune and friend of Count Tolstoy, was written in the Roxbury Court today before Judge Palmer. As it appeared on the court records, it read: "A year in the house of correction; sentence suspended."

Augusta Pearson, who charged that the friend of the great Russian thinker had done sundry things against her, including assault and battery, was sentenced to six months in the house of correction, charged with an offence forbidden by statute and the sentence suspended.

Michelson was accused of the same offence as well.

OUSTED BY REQUEST OF ALLEN

Attorney-General Asked Immediate Action to Deprive Gordon of Position

Developments in the case of Nathan A. Tufts, former district attorney of Middlesex County, removed from office last week by the Supreme Court on charges of misconduct, were today:

Formal charges similar to those against Tufts were preferred against Gordon by McBride, and the captain will have to appear before a police trial board of three captains to answer them.

The admission on the part of Cambridge police officials that the removal of Gordon means the beginning of a shakeup in the police department of that city.

Predictions from reliable sources that criminal proceedings would be instituted against Tufts in connection with his alleged conspiracy with Mrs. Helen Adams against Captain Stearns, from whom she was seeking divorce.

No important did Attorney-General Allen regard the removal of Gordon from the post he has been filling for more than eight years, that he sent a personal letter to Chief McBride, say-

DISBARMENT OF JOHN P. LEAHY IS SOUGHT

More disbarment proceedings were instituted by the Boston Bar Association today when a petition was filed in the Superior Court asking that Attorney John P. Leahy of Brookline and Boston be dismissed from the ranks of practicing attorneys for alleged unprofessional conduct.

Leahy lives on Stedman street, Brookline, and has an office at No. 40 Court street.

One of the main charges against Leahy is that he was guilty of irregularities in connection with a loan from one of his clients. It is alleged that he induced Joanna Gorman, administratrix of the estate of Dennis J. Gorman, to lend him $2,500; that he gave notes and second mortgages on a South Boston property as security, but that he failed to record the assignments in case of the mortgages, as required by law.

The allegation further reads that Leahy failed to pay Mrs. Gorman her instalments when they were due; that a check he gave her on the Paul Revere Trust Company came back marked "No funds," and that he finally declined to pay any more interest, and the notes were taken up by a relative.

This complaint was brought to the attention of the grievance commitee of the Bar Association back in 1919.

Another charge was that he retained $1,075, which he collected in settling a suit by Julia G. Marvin against Joseph Eaton. The woman was about to bring suit, when the settlement was made.

It was further charged that in 1917 he was given $261.18 by John Sullivan to pay an inheritance tax on an estate of which Sullivan was administrator and that he never paid over the money although entering it on the accounts as if it had been paid.

A somewhat similar charge was that he accepted $650 from a client, Annie Mcdurty of Dorchester, with which to buy property, and never made the purchase or returned the money.

Arrest of Harry F. Townsend, of No. 462 Putnam avenue, Cambridge, on a charge of having murdered his sister Margaret, whose strangled body was found in a closet of a New York lodging house last week, was expected at any moment today.

The Boston and New York detectives at work on the case say that they have many lines leading them to the wanted man, who disappeared last week after telephoning to his brother, Robert Townsend, a Cambridge barber, that he had identified the clothing of the girl.

And while the search for Harry has extended to eight different States, the aged mother of the murdered girl sits in her home in Cambridge, weeping for her child and all unconscious of ing that action to detach Gordon be taken immediately.

3 WOMEN FACE CRIMINAL PROSECUTION AS STEARNS CASE PLOTTERS

Upon receipt of this letter McBride and Mayor Quinn held a lengthy conference regarding the disposition of the case against Gordon, at the conclusion of which McBride announced that he had been detached and that the formal charges will be filed against him as soon as they could be drawn up and a copy of them supplied the official.

Asked for reasons for demanding the removal of Gordon, Attorney-General Allen said:

"If that letter is to be made public at all it should be done by the person who received it. I have no objection to Chief McBride taking this step if he sees fit to do so."

Allen intimated that Charles R. Cabot of Newton, the assistant attorney-general appointed to take temporary charge of Tufts' office, pending appointment of a permanent successor by Governor Cox, would take no steps to start new cases, but would leave the office in such a state that Tufts' successor would be footfree to conduct the office.

It was asserted that the criminal proceedings against the former district attorney, will be based upon the alleged conspiracy with Mrs. Helen Stearns in connection with her suit for divorce from Captain Stearns.

Chief McBride and Mayor Quinn of Cambridge held a conference on the action to be taken in connection with Captain Gordon's alleged activities.

UP TO TRIAL BODY.

While no statement would be made by either of the officials, it was asserted by those close to both of them that the matter would be submitted to a trial board and that proceedings to oust Captain Gordon will be started soon.

Cabot took charge of Tufts' office today. A special meeting of the grand jury was held at once and the jurors were addressed by Judge Brown, who thanked them for their service and told them they would not be needed until Thursday of this week.

The Governor today asked Attorney-General Allen for an opinion as to whether a district attorney is a judicial officer. This step was taken to clear the way for the appointment of Tufts' successor.

The opinion of the Attorney-General may result in the immediate appointment of a successor or the holding up the appointment until October 13. Under the law the Governor's Council is required to defer confirmation of an appointment of a judicial officer for seven days.

WOULD DELAY ACTION.

If then Attorney-General Allen decides that a district attorney is a judicial officer under the law, the vacancy can not be filled until October 13. If the decision is otherwise it probably will be made at the meeting of the council on Wednesday.

It is possible that Governor Cox may call a special session of the council to hurry the matter forward.

The scramble for the vacant post brought forth a stern rebuke from the Governor today. He said that candidates for the post visited him and asked for appointment even before Tufts was removed.

To each of these he is declared to have said: "Do you think it right to prejudice the case in this way. Why not wait until the decision is handed down?"

Among the names mentioned as the possible successors to Tufts was that of Assistant Attorney-General Edwin H. Abbot, Jr., but Abbot today withdrew his name from consideration.

Representative James E. Brown, of Everett was added to the list today. He has served in the General Court, and as city solicitor of Everett, and is a brother of Judge Nelson P. Brown, who was defeated by Tufts for the Republican nomination for district attorney.

Attorney-General Allen has announced that the four assistant district attorneys of Middlesex County, who were automatically named when the Supreme Court removed Tufts, will not be reappointed. The assistants dropped are: Herman A. Wagner of Everett, Raoul H. Beaudroy of Marlboro, Mrs. M. Frances Brady of Watertown and Frank Goldman of Lowell.

Gordon's brother, Patrolman Edward Gordon, was suspended months ago because of charges growing out of auto thefts. Repeated attempts to reinstate him to the force pending disposition of charges on Suffolk County have failed. Evidence at the Tufts' trial showed that Captain Gordon got Theresa Sears to sign a paper in the Mishawum Manor case, which the prosecution claimed was a release.

State Detective Silas P. Smith figured with Captain Gordon in the Theresa Sears incident, according to the testimony, and Smith accompanied Gordon on the flat in Cambridge, where Monroe, a wealthy bachelor and world-trotter, was found with Mrs. Lord.

The blunt finding of the Supreme Court that Tufts was guilty of conspiracy in the Stearns divorce case indicates that this case proved the gravest, in a series, voluminous bill of complaint and that it will form the basis of proposed criminal proceedings not only against Tufts but others whose names figured in the alleged Stearns divorce intrigue.

Three women, one the former wife of Captain Charles Ephrim Stearns, since remarried, a resident of Coos Cove, N. Y., are brought within the pale of prosecution by the finding of the Supreme Court in the Stearns divorce scandal. In pronouncing Tufts guilty in the Stearns case, the Supreme Court refrained from naming any of the other alleged conspirators but did brand it a "conspiracy."

This opened the way for criminal action against the others named in Attorney-General Allen's bill of information.

With a conspiracy thus established by the highest tribunal in the State, the persons named by Attorney-General Allen automatically remain implicated and subject to prosecution if the authorities elect to take such a course.

In the specifications which Allen filed supplemental to his bill of information, he says:

"As to paragraph 26, the names of the persons who conspired with the said district attorney are Helen W. Stearns, a woman who called herself 'Miss Pennington' and a woman who called herself 'Miss Shaw.' Your informant further says that he is of the belief that the names given by the two last mentioned women were not their true names. The time of said conspiracy set forth in paragraph 26 was on or about the first week in April, 1918."

Coakley acted as counsel for Mrs. Stearns. He hotly denied on the witness stand having had any hand in the alleged plot of sending "Miss Pennington" to Old Point Comfort, Va., the "camp" Captain Stearns.

Special Assistant Attorney-General William Flaherty offered sensational evidence in rebuttal concerning "Miss Pennington" and her chum, "Miss Shaw" and the Supreme Court accepted this evidence as shown in its ruling on the Stearns case.

Flaherty introduced witnesses and records proving that "Miss Pennington" had rented apartments in a fashionable apartment in Cambridge, that she signed a register at the garage where she kept her nifty car and that she gave as reference the name of Daniel Rughrue, in Coakley's office.

The evidence also showed that Rughrue had vouched for the girl when she rented the Harvard street apartment.

Legal experts today pointed out that criminal action against Tufts was made compulsory by the full court's finding. Although Samuel L. Powers, president of the Middlesex Bar Association, said no action had been taken to date, it was said that an early meeting will be held by the grievance committee to consider disbarring Tufts.

The popular opinion today in Boston and Cambridge was that indictment proceedings against Tufts, Coakley, Corcoran, McIsaac and other lawyers whose names figured in the Stearns matter and several more cases will first be disposed of before criminal proceedings are started. That is a matter of conjecture, however, as Attorney-General Allen and his assistants declined to hint the slightest hint of their plan of campaign.

It was predicted today that developments this week would be swift and sensational. With Tufts' case disposed of, indictment proceedings against Coakley, Corcoran and McIsaac promised prompt action. Interest turns to the drive against District Attorney Joseph C. Pelletier of Suffolk.

EXPOSURE THREATENED.

On a certain day thereafter, two men presented themselves at the ship builder's office, and announced that they were representatives of the "Western Detective Agency."

When asked what they wanted, the men bluntly informed the ship builder that they had called on him on the evening before mentioned, and that they "had the goods" on him. They declared that their superiors were sent out and these reports told in detail of his experiences with his woman friend. The men added that the reports were decidedly unfavorable.

Further questioning brought out the statement that the "detectives" stood ready to "make the report a favorable one," if given the ship builder "a clean bill of health," if he would pay a sufficient sum of money.

ORDERS RING MEN OUT.

The amount wanted was not stated, but the men emphasized the statement that they were ready to change their report and save the "victim" a "lot of publicity."

The shipbuilder lost his temper and ordered the two men to leave his office, telling them where they might go. They left, threatening him with exposure unless he changed his mind.

Before the men got away, the shipbuilder was advised of an inspiration, and called after them. They came back, and he told them that he had changed his mind and was ready to discuss the matter with them again. He then asked them to visit him at his garage on a certain night, which they agreed to do.

The shipbuilder on the chosen night, armed himself and his night foreman with pistols, and prepared to greet the emissaries of the gang.

COUNTER-TRAP FAILS.

It was his plan to overpower them, tie them up, place the pistols in their pockets and then notify the police. Unfortunately the gangsters failed to appear.

The second of the two men who visited the shipbuilder was described by him as being short and slim, wearing eye-glasses, and was apparently a victim of tuberculosis. The other was big and broad-shouldered, giving the appearance of a policeman in plain clothes. He was well fitted for the part of strong-arm detective.

This was not the first time an attempt had been made to "frame" this particular victim, and the victims were equally unsuccessful.

On this occasion the gang managed to get two women into the man's home during the absence of his wife. They appeared on the pretext that they wished to buy his home, which at that time was listed for sale, and which was a large and palatial dwelling.

WOMEN IN HIS HOME.

The two women, who were young and exceedingly good looking, expressed much enthusiasm over the house, and insisted on being shown every room.

They then wished the shipbuilder to take them into the bedroom, but he became suspicious and attempted to put them off on a pretext. The women urged and eventually with success and eventually the shipbuilder got them out of the house. It was evident to him that their appearance was part of a plot, and that if he had agreed to their request, a raiding party would have made its appearance shortly.

The man in question made considerable money during the war, and the gang, learning of it, apparently made up their minds that he would be the victim.

What has been taking place.

The attorney, whose client defied the gang, was also counsel for another Essex county man, who feared the effects of a "fake" alienation of affections suit, and settled with the blackmailers for $6,500, a ridiculously small amount in comparison with the sum demanded.

The attorneys who approached the counsel for the Essex county man in these cases were William J. Corcoran and William J. Kelley of Boston. The evidence in these cases is at the disposal of the Bar Association.

The Boston American has revealed that Corcoran and Kelley were leaders in the gang. They were assisted by William J. Harinett, a runner for Kelley, and Michael J. Lyons, Harinett is a former police officer, who served a prison sentence, and Lyons was employed by Special Attorney Joseph Scanlan of Fall River as an investigator while taking part in the operations of the gang at the same time.

RING RIDED ITS TIME.

In both cases of the Essex County men referred to, their counsel urged them to defy the blackmailers, and dare them to go ahead with their threatened publicity. In one case, it has been stated, this advice was carried out.

In this case, the "victim," who is wealthy, was marked down by the gang, and a plot to trap him was hatched in Boston. The gang then bided their time, waiting until a favorable moment should arrive to spring their trap.

As usual the plan was gone over several times, to make sure that it was "foolproof," and at length word was received that the quarry had been snared. A "trailing" party hurried to the house where the victim was located, and, at the psychological moment, broke in, only to find that he discovered in a compromising position with a woman, but at the moment was badly frightened.

ONE POSED AS OFFICER.

One of the raiding party declared that he was a policeman, and the victim was so confused that the only way he could avoid arrest and subsequent publicity was to "come through."

He was further informed that the woman with whom he was caught was married and that her husband, on learning the details, would be extremely likely to bring suit.

Further conversation then took place, and it was finally decided that $100,000, if paid promptly, would prevent any subsequent action from being taken. The gang, before departing, warned the man that unless he paid the ransom demanded, he would be summoned to appear in the Middlesex County Court at Cambridge. It was subsequently that a pseudo-policeman was a member of the Cambridge police department.

CORCORAN QUIT.

The "victim" went to his attorney with the story, and was told to stand firm. This advice was accepted and the attorney was told to handle the matter in any way in which he saw fit.

In a short time William J. Corcoran approached this attorney, declaring that he was counsel for the "husband" of the woman who had been caught in the raid. He said this "husband" wanted $100,000 for the alleged alienation of his wife's affections.

Instead of temporizing or agreeing to have his client pay the money, the attorney flatly told Corcoran that not one penny would be paid, and that his client was willing to face any action. That was the end.

The case never appeared in court, and an investigation revealed the fact that no warrant was ever issued in this connection from the court of Cambridge, and that no member of the Cambridge police department had participated in the raid. The attorney declared that the entire proceeding was a carefully planned attempt at blackmail, which might have succeeded if his client had been weak enough to surrender.

USUAL "HUSBAND" APPEARED.

In the case of the other client, however, he was unsuccessful in beating off the blackmailers, and was forced to make a settlement, as the man he represented was afraid of the effect of a threatened breach of promise suit.

The victim, who is a prominent figure in public life, asked what sum would be necessary to prevent any publicity, and a figure of large proportions was named as "compensation."

The man consulted with his attorney, and although advised to refuse, decided to compromise. He eventually made a settlement with the gang for $4,500, a little of one-fifth of that originally demanded. William J. Kelley of No. 40 Court street, Boston, was the lawyer who appeared against the victim in this case.

BALKED BY SHIPBUILDER.

Another instance of the success with which the blackmailing gang could be defied was afforded by a wealthy Boston man, a shipbuilder and proprietor of a large public garage, which occurred less than two months ago.

This man not only defied the gang, but laid a trap for two of the members, intending to turn them over to the police, but they failed to walk into it.

The efforts made to secure the man in question were much cruder than those previously "pulled," and lacked the finesse with which some of the big coups were carried out.

The prospective "victim," in telling his story to Boston American investigators, said an attempt was made to trap him, the gang confining their efforts to following him about.

A short time after this he had been talking with other wealthy men about the activities of the blackmail gang, and that they had discussed the advisability of forming a pool to fight it.

Peculiarly enough one of the men with whom this conversation was held gave himself away by committing a breach of promise case a short time later, but the proceedings were dropped a short time after.

The ship builder first learned of the fact that the gang were on his trail a few days following an incident which a young woman had accompanied him temporarily to the Hotel Touraine during the course of this ride, the couple visited several place along the North Shore, finishing the Anchorage Club at Nahant.

EXPOSURE THREATENED.

On a certain day thereafter, two men presented themselves at the ship builder's office, and announced that they were representatives of the "Western Detective Agency."

When asked what they wanted, the men bluntly informed the ship builder that they had called on him on the evening before mentioned, and that they "had the goods" on him. They declared that their superiors were sent out and these reports told in detail of his experiences with his woman friend. The men added that the reports were decidedly unfavorable.

Further questioning brought out the statement that the "detectives" stood ready to "make the report a favorable one," if given the ship builder "a clean bill of health," if he would pay a sufficient sum of money.

ORDERS RING MEN OUT.

The amount wanted was not stated, but the men emphasized the statement that they were ready to change their report and save the "victim" a "lot of publicity."

The shipbuilder lost his temper and ordered the two men to leave his office, telling them where they might go. They left, threatening him with exposure unless he changed his mind.

Before the men got away, the shipbuilder was advised of an inspiration, and called after them. They came back, and he told them that he had changed his mind and was ready to discuss the matter with them again. He then asked them to visit him at his garage on a certain night, which they agreed to do.

The shipbuilder on the chosen night, armed himself and his night foreman with pistols, and prepared to greet the emissaries of the gang.

COUNTER-TRAP FAILS.

It was his plan to overpower them, tie them up, place the pistols in their pockets and then notify the police. Unfortunately the gangsters failed to appear.

The second of the two men who visited the shipbuilder was described by him as being short and slim, wearing eye-glasses, and was apparently a victim of tuberculosis. The other was big and broad-shouldered, giving the appearance of a policeman in plain clothes. He was well fitted for the part of strong-arm detective.

This was not the first time an attempt had been made to "frame" this particular victim, and the victims were equally unsuccessful.

On this occasion the gang managed to get two women into the man's home during the absence of his wife. They appeared on the pretext that they wished to buy his home, which at that time was listed for sale, and which was a large and palatial dwelling.

WOMEN IN HIS HOME.

The two women, who were young and exceedingly good looking, expressed much enthusiasm over the house, and insisted on being shown every room.

They then wished the shipbuilder to take them into the bedroom, but he became suspicious and attempted to put them off on a pretext. The women urged and eventually with success and eventually the shipbuilder got them out of the house. It was evident to him that their appearance was part of a plot, and that if he had agreed to their request, a raiding party would have made its appearance shortly.

The man in question made considerable money during the war, and the gang, learning of it, apparently made up their minds that he would become an easy victim.

APPROACHED BY SIREN.

One of the first attempts to loot his coffers was made by a young girl, who has since been identified as one of the women working for the blackmail ring. The siren attempted to induce the shipbuilder to accompany her on several "special parties," but he failed to succumb to her blandishments. Each of these invitations was extended during the absence of the shipbuilder's wife, but he escaped the trap.

At the time when the conference was held with regard to raising a fund to fight the blackmail ring, the shipbuilder stated that he was ready to contribute. Since his experiences at the hands of the blackmail ring he has declared himself willing to help the authorities in every way, and his testimony has been turned over to the Bar Association.

STONEMAN GIVES HIS CONNECTION WITH CASE

David Stoneman, the Milk street attorney, whose name was mentioned in the Boston American's story of the alleged blackmail of Allen C. Jones, proprietor of the American House, Hanover street, made the following statement of his connection with the case:

"Realizing that the Boston American is the standard bearer in the fight for truth and justice in all matters, I am taking this opportunity to give you the fullest information regarding the conduct of myself in the alleged blackmailing case of Allen C. Jones of the American House.

"This statement will stand the closest scrutiny and in support of my statement the Boston American, through its editor, may appoint the most efficient investigator or investigators, so that that the following statement may be substantiated in every particular to the smallest detail. The facts are as follows:

"On December 16, 1916, Mr. Jones was brought to my office by Mr. Frank H. Jenkins of No. 7 Water street, Boston. Mr. Jenkins is a friend of mine of long standing; is associated with Arthur F. Breed, an attorney-at-law and is a man of good standing and of excellent reputation.

"At that time Mr. Jones was involved in several important matters of litigation. He had been represented by Mr. Sherman Whipple and told me that he owed a large bill for services to Mr. Whipple, which he was unable to pay, and that Mr. Whipple was unwilling to render further services.

EVICTION CASE LOST.

"He further told me that he had been evicted from the American House by Mr. J. Sumner Draper, that Mr. Whipple had just tried the ejectment case for him and had lost it; that all of his furniture and effects were in the storage warehouse; that a man named Hager had obtained a judgment against him and was threatening to arrest him; that he had brought suit against Mr. Draper in the sum of $250,000; and that his former wife, who had resided in California, was threatening to bring proceedings for non-payment of alimony.

"I took charge of all these matters for Mr. Jones and acted for him continuously from December 16, 1916, to March 2, 1918. During that period he also employed me to negotiate for the purchase of the American House and for the purpose of organizing a syndicate to assist him to raise about $600,000 for that purpose. He also had important disputes with Mr. Simon Vorenberg, who later bought the American House property—with the Summerfield Company with whom the American House furnishings were stored—and with his former counsel, Messrs. Fowler, Bauer & Kenney, who sued him for services.

BOOKS SHOW SERVICES.

"The services rendered were important and difficult and my books show in detail what they were. The matter of his wife's alimony was adjusted with her attorney, Mr. Flanagan, by the payment of $500 and I obtained from her a release to Mr. Jones of all claims for alimony for all times. There never was to my knowledge any criminal complaint against Jones and his statement or threats to false.

"On July 12, 1918, I rendered an itemized bill to him for all services rendered from December 26, 1916, to March 2, 1918. He called at my office and agreed with me that $7,500 was a reasonable charge. He told me, however, that while his financial condition had improved, he was still unable to pay my bill and offered me his note for $7,500 payable $500 monthly. This I accepted and I wrote him a letter on July 21, 1918, which reads as follows:

"Dear Mr. Jones:

"Confirming my conversation with you in this office this morning, I herewith enclose bill for services rendered to you to date amounting to seventy-five hundred dollars ($7,500).

"As I told you, I understand that your present financial condition is such that you are unable to pay this bill, but I am willing to wait a reasonable time until you get on your feet and are in a position to take care of it.

"In the meantime I shall give instructions to turn over all papers relating to my desire to Mr. Carl Gerstein, who, I understand, will from now on take care of your legal matters. I will retain, however, the papers in the Draper litigation merely for the purpose of attempting to put through a settlement, if possible. Should I be unable to make any headway with Mr. Draper's counsel, I will inform you in a short time and you may either leave the case here or let Mr. Gerstein take hold of it.

"I have written Mr. Gerstein that he is at liberty to proceed in all your matters.

"Yours very truly,

"David Stoneman."

On the same day I also wrote a letter to his new counsel, which is as follows:

"Carl Gerstein, Esq.

"Dear Sir:

"We are withdrawing from all litigation and other matters in which we appear for Allen C. Jones of the American House, and we are told by him that you will hereafter to take care of his matters.

"You are at liberty to call at this office at your leisure and take with you all papers which we have belonging to him.

"Yours very truly,

"David Stoneman."

"This closed the incident. Since July, 1918, he had paid but $400 on account of the note and on December 7, 1920, I learned that he had filed a petition in bankruptcy. A young man in my office was later elected trustee in bankruptcy and upon examination of Mr. Jones it developed that he had given thousands of dollars' worth of jewelry and an automobile to his wife, under circumstances probably fraudulent as against creditors.

"Accordingly, I brought a bill in equity in the Superior Court against him and his wife to recover the jewelry and the automobile, alleging that they had been conveyed by him in fraud to creditors. This suit is now pending, will be tried shortly, and is the real cause for his animosity against me.

"In view of your article which has received considerable prominence, I have this day written the Grievance Committee of the Bar Association, requesting an immediate and thorough investigation of this matter."

EXPECT ARREST OF BROTHER IN GIRL'S DEATH

Harry F. Townsend Accused of Murdering His Sister in New York

She is waiting patiently and confidently for his return, as he promised, bringing with him the body of the slain girl for burial here.

Meantime, the police are busily spinning the web in which they declare he will be trapped. Officers at work on the case agree that the murder is the most unusual case they have come across in their years of police work.

A STRANGE TRAGEDY.

They insist that the discovery of the girl's body, covered with a heap of newspapers, a cotton stocking tied tightly around her throat, and her mouth stuffed full of rags and bound about with an old towel, disclosed one of the strangest affairs between a brother and sister they have ever heard of.

After trailing back over the footsteps of the murdered girl, who was known in New York as "Mrs. Fay," the police have come to sum up a case that looks exceedingly black against the missing brother.

Margaret Townsend came with her two brothers, Robert and Harry, from Nova Scotia some five or six years ago. Robert was a barber, Harry, an marine engineer, employed on barges running between Boston and New York and other southern ports.

SHY AND TIMID GIRL.

Harry is a good looking, smooth-talking man of many trades. At one time or another he has run a restaurant, sold automobile tires and accessories, been a seaman before the mast, a marine engineer, a clerk.

But the one thing in the line of his family knew, had he a sweetheart.

"He thought too much of Margaret for that," explained his mother today.

Margaret is described as shy, rather timid girl who never had many close friends, either girls or boys. Harry and Robert were her only "beaus." Never in their life have they been anywhere with any man other than one of her brothers, according to Mary.

They walked together in the park like lovers, and some months ago Margaret showed a diamond ring which she wore as would another girl the engagement ring, that pledged her troth to a sweetheart.

Last June the neighbors began to notice that Harry and Margaret were quarreling as never before. Then, in July, Margaret told her mother that she had accepted a position as nurse-maid with a family named Harris.

She went away on her "job." Soon letters began coming to the girl. On the top of the inside page were the words "The Cape," but the envelope bore the address, 9 Hubert Square, Dorchester.

Mrs. Townsend suspected that anything was wrong entered the minds of the mother or Robert.

"GOING TO BEAR MOUNTAIN."

In September came a letter saying that the "Harris" family was going to Bear Mountain, a resort up the Hudson from New York, and that Margaret was going with them.

Here comes the first of the significant points the police are working on. On September 21, the day she is believed to have been killed, Margaret wrote home a postcard. It bore the words "Bear Mountain" on the back, but the postmark was "Station W, 13 New York City."

Another postcard of the same date and the same time from Harry bore the postmark "Hudson Terminal Station."

IDENTIFIED BODY.

The next step was the discovery of the body. Hurry was in Boston at the time. He drew the attention of the family to the finding of the girl's body and suggested that he go to New York to see if the body of "Mrs. Fay" would be that of their sister, Margaret.

Robert lent him $25 to make the trip, as he said he was "broke."

The next thing the family heard was a telephone message from Harry to Robert, saying that he had identified the clothing of the Fay girl as that of Margaret, but had not been allowed to see the body "because the police are photographing the finger prints on her throat, in an effort to find the murderer."

At the time this message was sent, say the police, no one but the murderer himself and the detectives at New York headquarters knew there were finger prints on the girl's throat.

IN DORCHESTER HOSPITAL.

They also declare that Harry had not gone to New York headquarters, and that they believe he telephoned from some Boston telephone station.

The real identification of the girl, they say, was made by the husband of a woman patient in Margaret, now living in Brooklyn. The sister had seen things about the girl that attracted attention, and sent her husband to the police. He identified Margaret's belongings as those of Margaret.

In the meantime the Boston American learned that while she was supposed to be working as a housemaid for "Mrs. Harris," Margaret Townsend was a patient in the St. Anne Maternity Hospital in Dorchester.

Search through the employment bureaus of the city failed to reveal the name of a job as Margaret had told her mother she had obtained in one of them. Further search among the families of Harris in Dorchester also failed to disclose any one of them who knew of Margaret Townsend, or who had spent the Summer "on the Cape," or had visited Bear Mountain.

ALLEGES FALSE ARREST

Mrs. Celia Schnider of No. 35 South Russell street, West End, the mother of seven children has filed two suits for $10,000 each against Sergeant Joseph L. Snow and Patrolman James Leonard of the Joy Street Station. She alleges false arrest. The suits are returnable in Superior Court today.

The filing of the suits follows a series of court cases in which Mrs. Schnider and her husband have appeared on various charges of liquor violation.

The husband of Mrs. Schnider first appeared in court in July, 1920, charged with selling antique furniture without a license. According to the story of the Schniders the arrest was one of spite, following the sale of a sewing machine to a neighbor, who later wanted the money for it returned.

It the lower court Schnider was fined $20 but later the charge was died.

According to the husband, the police on three occasions later visited the house in search of liquor. On the fourth visit he said, they seized a quantity which he declared was for his own use.

Schnider protested the seizure, as the officers, he declared, did not have a warrant. Words followed between his wife and the officers, he says, and in the melee Mrs. Schnider was knocked down.

The husband and wife were arrested and fined $100 each on this occasion but were found not guilty by a Superior Court jury which heard the case on appeal.

Then, according to Schnider, his wife was arrested again on a liquor selling charge, and was taken out of her house without being given time to dress. She was arraigned on the last charge before Judge Wentworth and was found not guilty.

NEWBURYPORT MAY BAR ONE-MAN CAR

The city government of Newburyport today denounced the one-man cars as a menace to the safety of the public and asked that they be removed from operation in that city.

Service is delayed, fares are unduly high and the one-man car "is a source of danger to the public," the agents of the city government said to the State Department of Public Utilities.

John C. Stanley, lone representative of the individual riders at today's hearing, said he was against the one-man lines there and if they are discontinued he feared the district would be without service.

Fred A. Cummings of the Eastern Massachusetts Street Railway said the one-man cars have operated 20,000,000 miles on that system, with fewer accidents than when the two-men cars were in operation. He said that not a single accident on that system can be attributed to the fact that the car was operated by one man.

Atlantic City, Oct. 3.—Irene Fenwick, widely known actress is helping her husband James O'Brien, a New York stock broker, spend $100,000 that he won on the baseball pennant race.

O'Brien picked both New York teams to win the pennants in the National and American Leagues races. He placed $25,000 at 4 to 1 when Johnstown was leading.

The bet was placed with a syndicate when O'Brien was attending the Dempsey-Carpentier fight last July and at the time was considered a rash act by his friends. But O'Brien celebrated the winning of the huge sum by giving a dinner to these same friends in Atlantic City and his clever wife was there to help him begin the spending. She is also planning on the disposition of a goodly part of the balance.

LIVED SIX YEARS WITH SPINE FRACTURED

Living six years with her spine fractured and then surviving a successful operation at the Boston City Hospital, is the experience of Mrs. Ottie S. Stetson, of No. 12 Redfield street, Neponset.

Six years ago Mrs. Stetson fell down a flight of stairs and dislocated her spine. She did not know it, but complained of pains to her family doctor. When the pain stopped she gave the matter no further thought, but in recent years, pains in the back again annoyed her.

A few days ago her physician advised that she go to the Boston City Hospital, where surgeons diagnosed her ailment as a fractured spine. An operation followed and she is reported as rapidly recovering.

1,000 MOOR REBELS SLAIN IN NEW BATTLE

BURGLAR CAUGHT LOOTING RICH NEWTON HOME

Accomplice Escapes, Leaping From Window to Dodge Shots of Police

One burglar was caught and another escaped by jumping through a window to the ground, thirteen feet below, when Newton police officers surprised them robbing the house of J. F. Twomey, a rich Boston leather merchant, at No. 849 Commonwealth avenue, Newton.

Both men were fashionably dressed, were working with an expensive automobile, which was standing in the Twomey house was the sixth of a series of actual breaks and attempts made in Newton and Brighton during the night.

ESCAPES POLICE VOLLEY.

Both men were armed, one with an automatic pistol and the other a pearl handled repeating revolver. The police fired at the escaping man as he jumped through the window and emptied their automatics at him as he disappeared in the darkness surrounding the house. The other man, who gave his name as John Hamilton of West Newton street, Boston, surrendered without a fight.

When arraigned in the Newton court he was held in $10,000 bail on three counts for the November Grand Jury.

The first intimation of the activities of the pair who were well-dressed came to the Newton police shortly after eight o'clock when Augustus M. Fousar, a Boston leather dealer, telephoned to the police suspicious of the actions of two man, riding in an expensive car, who had called at his house asking for "a Mr. Burns."

FOUND FAMILY HOME.

He and his family were sitting in the darkness on the front piazza, he stated. The two men approached the veranda and appeared to be surprised that anyone was there. Mr. Fousar said that the men made profuse apologies when they were informed that "Mr. Burns" did not live there, and withdrew to their auto.

Lieutenant Mullen who got the message from Fousar immediately sent out a squad of police to round up the car and its mysterious passengers.

Less than five minutes later the police were informed over the telephone of a break at the home of Charles M. Scudder, also a wealthy leather merchant, living at No. 279 Commonwealth avenue.

RANSACK SCUDDER HOME.

Scudder stated that as he reached home in his auto he saw a large car in the driveway, and as he approached the front door, he stated, two men rushed out, and jumping into the machine, drove off.

The front door had been jimied and the whole house had been ransacked of jewelry and clothing.

Three of the officers, Sergeant Desmond and Patrolmen Carolino and Mahoney, found the car described, by Fousar and Scudder, in the home of J. F. Twomey of No. 849 Commonwealth avenue.

They were just about to enter when the Twomey family and Mr. and Mrs. E. A. Loud, who live with them, drove up in an automobile. They were informed that burglars were in their house and warned not to enter.

The two women took shelter under the veranda and the men entered with the two patrolmen. They found that the door had been literally torn from its hinges. They made their way upstairs and hearing the two robbers at work in one of the bedrooms rushed in with revolvers drawn and ordered the men to throw up their hands.

One of the men obeyed, the other crashed through the French window and dropped to the ground. The policemen jumped to the window and emptied their revolvers, but the man made his escape.

The man captured was dressed in clothes of the latest pattern and wore white kid gloves, presumably to avoid the leaving of finger prints. He was taken immediately to the Newton police station while the other officers combed the vicinity for his companion.

In the pocket of the man arrested the police found a jimmy, a blackjack and several hundred dollars' worth of watches and jewelry, evidently stolen in the burglaries committed last night.

The car in which the two rode was new and had a New York registration. It is believed that it was recently stolen. In the car three police found watches, earrings, lorgnettes, purses, money, silk stockings, silk slippers, silver and gold, the property of Theodore M. Munros of No. 1939 Commonwealth avenue, Brighton, and several overcoats and other articles of clothing.

The Munros home had been broken into earlier in the evening and articles valued at several hundred dollars had been stolen.

HEIRLOOMS MISSING.

Only jewelry, the property of Mrs. Munros, was considered valuable by her because of being family heirlooms, are numbered among the missing articles. Pearls, cuff links, stickpins and two overcoats were also taken.

Mr. Munros, who is a Boston real estate operator with offices in the Tremont Building, stated he and his wife left the house for the evening shortly before 7 o'clock. Shortly after a neighbor passing by noticed the window shades drawn. A light now believed to be a flashlight, was flashed back and forth in the darkened house.

The greater part of the stolen loot was identified today by Mrs. Theodore Munros of No. 1939 Commonwealth avenue, Brighton, and Mrs. J. F. Toomey of Commonwealth avenue, Newton, as their property. A few articles of jewelry hidden in the auto, have not been claimed. Efforts of the police to find the owner of the car have so far not succeeded. The car had New York license number 197-153.

Roger W. Babson's Wife Goes to School With Her Japanese Chef

MRS. ROGER W. BABSON AND FRED SUGAYA

Mrs. Babson's Japanese chef is ambitious to enter the commercial life of his native land. He confided his aspirations to his mistress. He is now taking, with Mrs. Babson, a course in accountancy at her husband's famous business college. Mrs. Babson is the first woman to enter the Babson Institute as a student.

DIVORCE GIVEN TO WIFE OF F. F. CHASE

A Japanese cook who said he refused to work longer for Francis F. Chase, Pearl street business man, because "the glasses at his Summer home in Cohasset usually smelled of whiskey," was a star witness against his ex-employer today in the divorce suit brought against Chase by Mrs. Anita Davis Chase of the Hotel Buckminster.

Mrs. Chase, who alleged gross and confirmed habits of intoxication, was granted a decree by Judge Callahan.

She told of a party at the Hotel Somerset to which her husband brought a suit case full of liquor.

The Japanese cook, after complaining of the odor of alcohol at the Cohasset Summer home of the Chases, said that on one occasion he noticed a bottle of liquor at night, and the bottle was empty in the morning; and that the attic contained a supply of whiskey to which the master of the house frequently repaired.

Mrs. M. L. Ely of the Hotel Buckminster testified that Chase was "drunk most of the time," but amended it later by adding "in the evening." She said he swore at and humiliated his wife while in his cups.

200 HUB DOCK MEN QUIT ON WAGE CUT

Ignoring the fact that their leaders and representatives of local steamship companies were holding a conference over the proposed cut from 80 to 65 cents an hour pay, 200 longshoremen employed on the dock of the Revere Sugar Refining Company on the Mystic River today threw up their jobs.

Officials of the steamship companies denied that it is a strike and said the work stopped because they had no place to store the 15,000,000 pounds of sugar from Cuba which arrived last week. The men declare it is a strike and a protest against the cut. Union officers say it is unauthorized and illegal.

The conference ended in a deadlock, though it was announced that there is still hope of a settlement. The men are demanding 40 hour week as at present. The companies stand out for a 48 hour week.

NORMAL SCHOOL SAFE AT WESTFIELD ROBBED

Westfield, Oct. 2.—Police today searched for the thieves who smashed open a safe in the State Normal School and stole a large sum of money, securities and teachers' pay checks which had been indorsed. The robbers used a twenty-pound sledge hammer and a heavy axe. Entrance to the building was gained through a cellar window.

She Follows Statistician's Rules; Cook Will Enter Business in Nippon.

BABSON'S RULES FOR WOMEN

1.—Learn to keep your husband.

2.—Learn to keep your money—and his.

3.—Learn to keep your health.

Keeping these three rules clearly in mind, Mrs. Roger W. Babson, wife of the celebrated statistician and business expert of Wellesley Hills, has enrolled as one of the students at the Babson Institute, founded by her husband and author of the rules.

In the same class of accountancy with Mrs. Babson is her chef, a Japanese, Fred Sugaya, who knows more about cooking than Roger Babson does about business, and wants to change his job from kitchen to business room back in Nippon.

Ever since Roger Babson founded his statistical bureau his wife has been its treasurer, and has had general supervision of its books. But the business has grown so of late that she has felt the need of applying another of her husband's rules—"Keep abreast of your work by constantly brushing up."

HUSBAND BREAKS RULE.

To do that she has compelled him to break another of his rules—not to allow women to enter as students in his institute.

Mrs. Babson was very much surprised and not a little put out to find that her enrollment had attracted public attention and had won space in the newspapers.

"I cannot, for the life of me, see why my move to study accountancy should have been considered a matter of news," said she.

"It became necessary for me to brush up my accountancy, and to do that I had either to go to Boston, which would have been difficult, as I am a busy woman, or to go to school here. I chose the latter, and the rule against co-education in the institute was abrogated in my favor merely because I happen to be the wife of the founder."

Mrs. Babson, a charming little woman, with a smile that lights up her face most delightfully when it comes, which is all too seldom, looks grave, almost stern, when her face is in repose.

She is the soul of neatness and evident efficiency. She manages her household on business principles and looks after her rather heavy duties in the statistical bureau as well.

She agrees thoroughly with her husband's three rules for women. That is why she has brought her daughter up to know and follow them carefully.

Miss Babson entered Boston University as a freshman this year, because, as Mrs. Babson explained, "that is the place of all others where the true meaning and real inwardness of those rules will be taught her.

HIS COOK'S AMBITIONS.

"If those rules were more generally understood by the women of the country and more generally followed, the tremendous menace of divorce, which is growing in this country so swiftly, would be robbed of much of its terror.

"When one stops to think that there were in the United States last year one-tenth as many divorces as there were marriages, some idea of the state of affairs and the need for positive steps to save the integrity of the American family, become apparent."

Sugaya says that as soon as he completes his studies in the Babson Institute he is going back to Japan to start in business for himself. In spite of the fact that this means the loss of a most satisfactory cook, Mr. and Mrs. Babson are lending Sugaya all possible assistance in reaching the goal of his ambition.

EXHUMATION OF SEARLES' BODY ORDERED

through his many years of residence in Methuen to escape the limelight of publicity now into fair, in death, to be one of the high spots in the most sensational revelations that have stirred the reading public of the State for years.

Dying apparently of ills incident to a good old age, the rake of investigation was brought out when the District Attorney received an unsigned letter intimating that the aged millionaire had been hastened to his end, which, it said, might not have been entirely "natural."

And with the exhumation of the body it is believed may come a revelation of slow poisoning to hasten on the death of the rich old recluse.

That he would welcome an investigation was the statement of Dr. Victor A. Reed, assistant medical examiner, and a doctor who attended Searles at times during his last illness. But, according to Reed, if subtle poisons were administered to the wailed-in millionaire, it was done at a period when he, Reed, was not in attendance. And, according to Reed, if poison had been administered, it would have been more apparent at the time of death.

Besides Dr. Reed, the district attorney planned today to question Dr. Henry F. Dearborn, who attended Searles during the two months I attended him. His heart seemed to be the real trouble. His heart seemed to be the fatal cause. He suffered from a peculiar nervous affection of the heart."

Dr. Joseph F. McCarthy, who will be questioned in connection with the last illness of Searles, today in New York said: "Under the circumstances, I do not care to make any statement. As a physician I cannot discuss the case."

Dr. Reed's statement that he was interested in an autopsy, recalling the stories that symptoms as being compatible with poisoning, created a stir in this city and in Methuen where Searles was born and had lived his lifetime of seventy-nine years. The outcome of District Attorney Donnell's action is being watched with keen interest.

It is hinted that the anonymous letter which is really the indirect cause of Dr. Reed's declaration to the effect that he would be interested in the exhumation of Searles' body for examination, was written by a person who lived close to the late art financier. While the missive was written in poor hand and contained misspellings, the belief has been expressed that these characteristics were affected merely as a disguise.

BRIDEGROOM IS HELD ON CHARGE OF LARCENY

Caught in Ogden, Utah, after his bride of only a few months had been forced to send home to friends in Boston for money, Harry B. Borland, thirty-five years old, will soon be in the Ogden, Utah, city jail to answer to a charge of larceny in the passing of five checks alleged to have been bogus.

Marrying a pretty girl several years his junior and at present employed as saleswoman in a Boston department store, Borland's honeymoon tour, on which he took his wife's brother, proved his downfall.

It is alleged that Borland, capitalizing his wife's acquaintance at several stores, passed the bad checks there just prior to and even on his wedding day. They left on a wedding trip, which ended for the bride at New Orleans. Borland, in letters after his bride had reached home, said he was going to Mexico, but these letters he was finally trapped at Ogden.

It is charged he passed worthless checks on Alfred L. Ballard, druggist, at No. 1441 Commonwealth avenue; Samuel Hankin, delicatessen store keeper, No. 1439A Commonwealth avenue; Davis Brothers, pharmacists, No. 1023 Washington street, and the Raymond Syndicate, No. 360 Washington street.

MISSING BOY IS FOUND DROWNED IN GLOUCESTER

Gloucester, Oct. 3.—The body of 11-year-old Frank Dahlmer, son of Captain and Mrs. John Dahlmer, was found floating from beneath the D. B. Smith wharf at the eastern end of the harbor today, badly mutilated and almost unrecognizable.

The boy disappeared from his home on Main street Sept. 22 after having been sent to a store for milk.

He was last seen on the edge of the Head Fisheries wharf. All traces of the lad was lost from this point and persistent grappling along the water front and in the docks failed to bring the body to the surface.

ROCKEFELLER'S DAUGHTER AND HUSBAND PART

Couple Are "Not Living Under Same Roof," Harold F. McCormick Announced

Chicago, Ill., Oct. 3.—Friends of the couple in this city learned today that Harold F. McCormick and his wife, the daughter of John D. Rockefeller are separated.

They have virtually lived apart for the last eight years, and intimates lean to the view that the situation will become permanent. Mr. McCormick confirmed the rumor of an estrangement in writing at his estate at Lake Forest. He and Mrs. McCormick arrived in Chicago from Europe on separate trains, but his presence here was kept secret. It had been announced in New York that both would return to Chicago on the Twentieth Century Limited to prove that rumors of their separation were unfounded.

When only Mrs. McCormick's party stepped from the train there were inquiries, especially as Mr. McCormick's New York representatives had assured inquirers that his employer was on the train and had sent him two telegrams on the way through Chicago.

On her own part, Mrs. McCormick again denied the rumors of separation and characterized them as ridiculous. Mr. McCormick was found in his Italian Castle at Lake Forest and issued this statement:

"Mr. Harold McCormick declines to make any statement beyond confirming the report that he and his wife are not living under the same roof."

Reports of separation and divorce have been in existence ever since Mrs. McCormick went to Switzerland eight years ago to be treated by Dr. Carl Jung, the celebrated Viennese psychologist. They have been persistently denied as often as they came back into circulation by Mr. and Mrs. McCormick.

MRS. STILLMAN REJECTS OFFER BY HUSBAND

Refuses to Accept Anything Short of Court Decision for Herself and Guy

New York, Oct. 3.—Upon one condition, James A. Stillman, multi-millionaire banker, is ready to drop charges of unfaithfulness against his wife, Mrs. Anne Potter Stillman, to acknowledge the legitimacy of little Guy Stillman, and to resume life with Mrs. Stillman.

This condition, it was learned today from advisers of Mrs. Stillman, is that both Stillman and his wife issue public statements. Banker Stillman's statement would be an acknowledgment of error, and Mrs. Stillman's would be to this effect:

"My husband admits he was in error when he dragged our affairs into a public forum. Against me and our baby Guy anyone could have been deceived by the facts presented to Mr. Stillman before he took court action."

Mrs. Stillman has rejected the proposal. She informed her husband's attorneys that she was through with him forever, had no use for him and no desire to see him again.

She further informed Banker Stillman that she would not accept anything short of a court decision for herself and Guy.

The latest reconciliation offer was made to the accused wife through a confidential attorney for Stillman and the spokesman, it was said, was Clifford A. Roberts.

DE VALERA NOT TO ATTEND CONFERENCE

Dublin, Oct. 3 (By Associated Press).—The Sinn Fein delegation to the conference in London, beginning October 11, which will explore the possibilities of a truce in the Irish situation with a view to a definite settlement, will leave Dublin next Monday, October 10, it was announced here today.

Eamon De Valera will not be one of the Sinn Fein delegates and will not go to London in connection with the conference, according to Desmond Fitzgerald, the Sinn Fein Minister of Propaganda, who made the announcement regarding the delegation's departure.

Belfast, Oct. 3.—Reports that Ulster had been invited to send delegates to the London conference next week on the Irish question, which have been circulated here, were officially denied today.

CHARGED WITH USING PROFANITY TO OFFICER

John P. Hennokus, of Byron court, Jamaica Plain, was arraigned in the district court of West Roxbury today, charged with profanity. The evidence showed that Hennokus had dropped a bottle on the sidewalk and when a patrolman asked if it had contained liquor, he told the officer to go to a spot often referred to by reformers. Judge Brackett after listening to the testimony placed the case on file.

The New Outdoor Sport

In the Toy Section Second Floor, Annex

The Pogo is a trick stick with which you are enabled to jump along like a kangaroo and has become quite the fad in many European cities. Before long there will be "pogoing" in our thoroughfares right here in Boston.

A Pogo is a stick with an ingenious device near the bottom made of India rubber and a spring. You mount the stick similar to the way you have seen youngsters mount scooter cars. On the pogo you can jump along without the least jar and no great amount of physical effort. Its lots of fun and thoroughly enjoyed.

Pogos come in 3 sizes and may be used by persons weighing up to 150 pounds. Prices 3.75, 4.00 and 4.50.

CONSIDER BOND ISSUE BY U. S. TO AID IDLE

Planned as Permanent Safeguard to Prevent Unemployment When Work Is Scarce

By Associated Press

Washington, Oct. 3.—Advisability of a Federal bond issue to create a fund for making loans to aid municipal public works in years of depression when jobs are scarce was under consideration today by sub-committees of the National Conference on Unemployment.

Such a proposal has been suggested to the conference as part of a plan for permanent safeguards against bad years for the nation's workers. No estimate of how many millions of dollars would be required for such a fund has been made as yet. The plan constitutes one of the recommendations of the conference advisory committee.

Loans to municipalities would be made by the Federal government under the plan only upon proof of national unemployment and industrial depression, as shown by industrial and unemployment statistics and upon proof of the soundness and utility of specific public works proposed. The interest rate for loans to municipalities would be not less than that paid by the Federal government.

"The next step in the emergency measures for the unemployed," Herbert Hoover said, today, "is definite organization by the Mayors. Employers and business men, the relief associations, the State and Federal agencies cannot surround the problem systematically until the Mayors have established strong emergency organizations with municipalities behind them."

Mr. Hoover made public telegrams from Mayors Fitzgerald of Cleveland and Peters of Boston, announcing the formation of emergency unemployment committees.

HUNGARY HAS 40,000 TROOPS ON FRONTIER

Vienna, Oct. 3.—An official Austrian military report, just made public here, declares that Hungary has 200,000 men under arms, 40,000 of whom are in the vicinity of the Austrian frontier. The entire force, says the report, is completely equipped for the field, from steel helmets to hand grenades, and also possesses four heavy siege guns of the Howitzer type.

JUDICIAL OATH ADMINISTERED TO TAFT

Chief Justice and Associates Pay Respects to President After Ceremony

By Associated Press

Washington, Oct. 3.—Administration of the judicial oath to William Howard Taft, the new chief justice of the United States, marked the reconvening today of the Supreme Court for the regular Fall term.

The oath was administered to Mr. Taft, who thereby becomes the first chief justice to have previously occupied the highest executive office in the nation, by the senior associate justice, Joseph McKenna. The oath taken today supplemented the constitutional oath administered July 11, soon after the appointment of the former President by President Harding.

The administration of the judicial oath, the final step in the induction of a new chief justice, was attended by all of the age-old ceremony attached to the nation's highest tribunal.

The chief justice and the associate justices, at the conclusion of these ceremonies, followed the custom established years ago and went to the White House to pay their respects to the President.

BOY OF SEVEN TWICE TRIES TO KILL SELF

Uxbridge, Oct. 3.—Friends and neighbors today cared for seven-year-old Joseph Knopf after he had twice tried to kill himself in fear of his father's wrath because of accidentally setting their home on fire. A blazing cat-o'-nine-tail the boy was playing with was thrown through a window. Dragged from the burning house, the boy tried to leap down a well, saying: "I might as well kill myself, for, if I don't, my father will do it when he comes home."

BOSTON SOCIETY HAPPENINGS

Notable Women to Run Hotel

Miss Margaret Greenwood, a member of the 1917 Sewing Circle, is one of Boston's most attractive society girls. She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. L. H. Greenwood of Louisburg square, and is engaged to Mr. Stevenson Pierce Taylor of New York.

Too often are people apt to visualize society women as the "gay butterflies" which novels and magazines of the non-highbrow type have repeatedly called them. Just there people are wrong, and several hundred Boston society women are going to prove it on November 16 when Woman's day at the Copley-Plaza takes place. On that day the entire hotel will be run by prominent women.

Efficiency is to be the watchword of the occasion, and I am told that as early as this week fair members of the "four hundred" will begin their "training" as bell-hops, waitresses, doorwomen, news stand girls and clerks. Fashionable matrons of the smart set and clever members of the exclusive Vincent Club are all setting to with a "right good will" to do well their part, whatever it may be, so that the machinery of the hotel will run with the utmost smoothness on Woman's Day.

Members of the committee in charge of the day's program want it clearly understood that the service which patrons of the Copley-Plaza will receive on November 16 will have nothing "amateurish" about it. Those who follow the various activities of Boston society know that there is very little of the amateur where charity is concerned; to wit: the highly artistic and clever Vincent Club "shows" given annually for some worthy benefit, as well as the many charity entertainments which were staged along the North and South Shores during the Summer months. The proceeds raised on Woman's Day will be used to aid in the building fund of a home for incurables on the Frances Willard farm, better known as Lleswao Lodge, Bedford, Mass.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles A. Kidder, who are at their country house in Boxborough, will not return to town until the first of November. The Winter home is at No. 120 Beacon street.

Mr. Alexander Robey, son of Dr. and Mrs. William H. Robey of Commonwealth avenue, has sailed aboard the Berengaria, to spend the Winter at Lincoln College, Oxford, Eng. Mr. Robey is a graduate of Harvard, class of '20.

Miss Eugenia Frothingham, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Langdon Frothingham of Beacon street, has returned to Boston following a stay at the Purinton Inn in Stockbridge. Miss Frothingham, with her parents and two sisters, will sail abroad on Wednesday.

The Marquis and Marquise De Ferrante are now settled for the Winter at No. 40 Fenway.

Mr. Charles Lowell Barlow is back at the Somerset Club after a visit with his mother, Mrs. Francis C. Barlow, at Sunnybank. Her granddaughter, Miss Louise Jay, returned to New York on Wednesday.

Mr. and Mrs. Arthur N. Hood and their daughter, Miss Frances Hood, have returned from their Summer home in Falmouth to their Winter residence on Hammond street, Chestnut Hill.

Mr. and Mrs. Clement S. Houghton of Chestnut Hill and Mrs. Louise Chavvenet of Chestnut street were among the Bostonians at Mrs. Frederick S. Coolidge's music festival given on the side of South Mountain, Pittsfield, in Mrs. Coolidge's Temple of Music.

BRIGHTON TANKS UNOPPOSED AT HEARING

Refining Company Asks Permit to Erect Four Receptacles on Cambridge Street

No one from Brighton appeared at the meeting of the Board of Street Commissioners today in opposition to the petition of the Atlantic Refining Company for the storage of 484,000 gallons of oils and gasoline.

John A. Sullivan appeared as counsel for the petitioner and the petitions were taken under advisement by the board.

One request is for the storage of 132,000 gallons of fuel oil, another is for the keeping of 132,000 gallons of gasoline, another for the storage of 132,000 gallons of naphtha and another for the storage of 88,000 gallons of lubricating oil.

Fire Commissioner John R. Murphy indorsed the petitions with the words "no objection." The petitions are signed by James J. Miller, agent of the refining company.

The oils, gasoline and naphtha are to be stored in four big tanks at No. 74 Cambridge street, Brighton. The tanks will be above ground and surrounded by concrete dykes. Outside the dykes will be retaining walls twenty-four inches in thickness.

STUDENT WOUNDED IN FIGHT WITH POLICE

New York, Oct. 3.—Declaring that he was from the South and believed in the "doctrines of the Ku Klux Klan," Montford S. Steel, said by the police to be a student at the Sheffield Scientific School, today resisted efforts of hospital attaches to dress several wounds received in a scuffle followed by his arrest on a charge of trying to shoot Police Patrolman Thomas Nyland. Trouble started, according to the police, when Nyland interfered in a dispute between Steel, another man and a young woman near Broadway and West Forty-fourth street. Steel hailed a taxicab, pushed the young woman into it, drove to a nearby hotel and reappeared with a revolver. A passing officer struck up the weapon just as it was being levelled at Nyland.

SCANLAN'S OFFICE AT STATE HOUSE DECORATED

Bernard P. Scanlan, secretary of the Special Commission on the Necessaries of Life, returned to his duties today, a bridegroom. His bride was Miss Marie Houghton, a resident of Melrose, which is also the home of Scanlan. Scanlan arrived at his office today to find it elaborately decorated in his honor, and he was presented with a beautiful French clock by the office force and the members of the commission.

PROGRAM FOR IRISH PARLEY OUTLINED

Repeal of Home Rule Partition Act Contemplated Under Tentative Plans

London, Oct. 3.—Early repeal of the Home Rule (Partition) Act, which is now in effect in Ireland, is contemplated under the tentative program for the Irish peace conference which will open here one week from tomorrow.

The real Irish peace parley will not sit on the eleventh, but will get under way later, probably in November, according to the present indications. The first sessions will deal with preliminaries.

Official circles were very optimistic today. There had been numerous consultations and exchanges of messages over the week-end which apparently showed that the spirit of hope was widespread. It is forecast that the peace conference procedure will follow these lines:

Premier Lloyd George and a delegation from the Cabinet will meet the Sinn Fein envoys in the Cabinet room at No. 10 Downing street on October 11. The first session will be devoted to the business of "getting acquainted."

Subsequent sessions will be held daily and in a fortnight it is expected that the conferees will have worked out the agenda and agreed upon a general skeleton of the peace work.

This skeleton probably will outline in concrete form the further concessions, which are anticipated by the Sinn Fein, including the promise that the House of Commons will repeal the Home Rule Act as soon as the new session opens.

Then will follow a recess, but how long this intermission will be cannot be foretold. It may be weeks or it may be a few days. After the recess the sitting will be held in historic St. James Palace.

Whether the Premier will have an opportunity to go to Washington will depend upon the length of the interval between the Downing Street and St. James Palace session.

WOULD COMPEL WEEK'S WAIT FOR MARRIAGES

Toronto, Ont., Oct. 3.—Change of the Canadian marriage laws so that couples would have to give a week's public notice of intention to wed was recommended today to the Social Service Council of the Church of England by its executive. Co-operation of other religious bodies was asked as a means of "safeguarding marriage and preventing hasty and ill-advised unions."

U. S. OFFICIALS DON'T EXPECT RAIL STRIKE

Small Beginnings

The custom of starting a silver chest for a young girl is one that is growing in favor. For the young girl of today is the bride of tomorrow. And tomorrow's bride will enjoy beautiful silver just as much as her mother and her grandmother have through their years of homemaking.

Once a pattern is selected, pieces may be added by the dozen, half dozen, or even singly, until the happy possessor has that prized possession—a chest of silver. The acquisitive pleasure of adding treasure to treasure is gratified in a way that is never a drain on the purse.

Silver always makes a delightful gift. It not only pleases when it is new, but its value increases as it shares in the daily life of the one who receives it.

Our silver is found upon the second floor. Here you may look it over quietly at leisure. We are glad to welcome visitors at all times. If you become familiar with the sort of merchandise we display, you will know where to select your gifts.

STEPDAUGHTER ON TRIAL FOR KABER MURDER

Marian McArdle, Third to Go Before Cleveland Jury in Crime, Denies Guilt

By Associated Press.

Cleveland, Oct. 3.—The trial of Marian McArdle, charged with the first degree murder of Daniel Kaber, her stepfather, was set for today. She is the third to be tried. Mrs. Eva Catherine Kaber, her mother, and Salvatore Cala are serving life sentences for the crime.

County Prosecutor Edward C. Stanton announced he would not seek the death penalty, but would demand a conviction for first degree murder.

The girl's knowledge of the plot to kill Kaber, which also involved Mrs. Mary Brickel, her 65-year-old grandmother, will be admitted by the defence, according to Francis W. Poulson, associate counsel for Miss McArdle, but a general denial that she participated in the murder conspiracy will be offered.

That Miss McArdle's devotion to her mother prevented her from interfering with or disclosing any details of the plot will be one of the pleas offered, Attorney Poulson said.

Kaber was stabbed to death in his Lakewood home more than two years ago by hired assassins. Cala confessed when arrested in Buffalo that he hold the hatchet, while Vittorio Piselli wielded the weapon. Mrs. Emma Colavita, who is alleged to have procured Cala and Piselli for Mrs. Kaber, is awaiting trial. Piselli has not been apprehended.

Mrs. Kaber will be brought from the Marysville Reformatory to testify for the defence. Prosecutor Stanton is considering summoning New York detectives who arrested Miss McArdle and her mother.

SALES TAX PLAN GAINS MORE SENATE VOTES

Many G. O. P. Members Inform Smoot They Are Inclined to Back His Measure

By International News Service.

Washington, Oct. 3.—The sales tax is gaining favor so rapidly in the Senate that Senator Smoot, its chief exponent, is of the opinion it has a first class chance of winning out.

Support of the pending tax revision bill received a jolt today when Senator New of Indiana, one of the Republican leaders of the Senate and closely associated with the Harding administration, declared himself unqualifiedly in favor of the adoption of Senator Smoot's sales tax plan.

Senator Smoot has received definite assurances from more than half of the 59 Republican Senators that they are strongly inclined to vote for his proposal of a manufacturers' sales tax of three per cent. He is confident even more of them will support it before the pending revenue revision bill is disposed of.

It is acknowledged that the Democratic side now holds the "ace in the hole" in the taxation game being played in the Senate. With the Republican side split, the 38 Democratic Senators are in a position to dictate the contents of tax legislation and, if they were to swing behind the sales tax, in a combination with more than half of the Republican side, even Republican leaders do not question but that it would be adopted.

CHILDREN CAUSE FIGHT BETWEEN MOTHERS

Mrs. Margaret Hansen of Wilmington Pays Fine; Opponent Bears Battle Scars

Following a pitched battle on a busy street in Wilmington between two angry and dishevled women, Mrs. Margaret Hansen of Brentwood avenue, Wilmington, was haled into Woburn District Court today and fined $15 for assault and battery. She paid.

Mrs. Elizabeth Adams of Woburn street, Wilmington, the complainant, appeared in court with one arm in a sling and a generous strip of court plaster covering the scars of battle on her face. The fight was in front of the Adams home and resulted from an argument over the respective short-comings of the Adams and Hansen children.

GEN. PERSHING TO INSPECT CEMETERIES

Paris, Oct. 3.—General Pershing will spend Wednesday and Thursday of this week inspecting all the American cemeteries in France, accompanied by Major Quakemeyer and Colonel Rethers, chief of the Graves Registration Service. They will leave Paris by automobile early Wednesday morning. General Pershing will finally approve of four permanent American cemeteries, the work of transferring the American dead to them having been nearly completed. This morning he received a delegation representing all the French liaison officers who served with the American Expeditionary Forces and thanked them for the part they played in bringing about the close understanding between the French and American armies.

HUNT WRECKERS OF TRAIN ON NEW HAVEN

Derailment Device Tampered With, Engine and Five Cars Leaving Track

Haybrook, Ct., Oct. 3.—Arrests may be made soon as the result of the wrecking of a New York to Boston train here early today. Railroad detectives and police hope to apprehend one or more persons believed to be responsible for the derailment.

Investigation showed that the derailment device at the point where the wreck occurred had been tampered with. Cotter pins and bolts had been removed.

According to railroad officials, only persons familiar with the workings of the device could have removed the bolts and pins in the manner that investigation reveals.

The purpose of the device was to derail a train in case it went too far in the drawbridge were open. A train would be derailed instead of going into the river. When today's wreck occurred the bridge was down but the "derail" was open.

Train No. 28 was traveling at a high rate of speed when it reached the "derail" and as the engineer saw the bridge in place he believed everything all right. The engine and five of the six cars left the track. The engine toppled over and rested on the side of an embankment. The cars remained upright. The engineer and fireman were thrown clear, escaping uninjured except for a few scratches and minor bruises.

The train left New York at 11:10 p. m., and consisted of a car of theatrical scenery bound for Providence, a car of racehorses, valued at $20,000 bound for the Brockton Fair, a baggage car, smoker and two coaches. Although the passengers were severely shaken, only one, Nahail Shken, of Central Falls, R. I., was reported being hurt. He complained of injuries to his back.

The passengers were transferred to a special train and proceeded to their destinations. While the wreck was being cleared another track was used for passage of trains.

In one of the coaches which was an express baggage car were two racehorses valued at $10,000 each, bound for the Brockton Fair.

BOSTON JEWRY USHERS IN NEW YEAR

All Day Services in Local Synagogues Started by Ceremony of Blowing the Shofar

Today is the first day of the Jewish new year, and about 50,000 Jews in Boston are taking a holiday to offer prayers of thanks and observe Jewish customs.

Government employes, school teachers, men in the military and naval service and store employes of the Jewish faith have been given the day off, and every synagogue in the city is ushering in the year 5682, according to the Jewish calendar, with all-day services.

The observance will be continued tomorrow. Today's services in the synagogues were started by the blowing of the shofar or ram's horn. At sundown Sunday candles were lit in every Jewish home, and they will be burned again this evening.

The Joy of Being Young at Fifty-Four

IT is only when we allow the heart to grow old that the passing years lay heavy burdens upon us. ¶Viewing in retrospect the past fifty-four years, on this occasion of our anniversary celebration, we find that the joyousness, the romantic idealism, the vivid colorfulness of youth still pervades the Slattery institution. ¶And we look thankfully back upon our growth, feeling grateful to the friends who permitted it—friends who appreciate our policy of service, rather than sales.

TODAY is the first day of our sale in celebration of the fifty-fourth anniversary. ¶But it is not a sale in which extremely low prices are quoted on slow-moving merchandise. ¶Our Fifty-Fourth Birthday Sale means that you will have an opportunity to buy at extraordinarily low prices, fine, fresh apparel purchased in Europe and America from the best makers especially for Slattery patrons. ¶We urge you to make your selections early this week—you will find style and quality first, and then price.

NEWS IN WORLD OF MOVING PICTURES

"Morality Clause" in Players' Contracts Expected to Be Big Help in Future

By FRIEDA DAVIS.

IT IS interesting to hear, in view of the stories that have been rife concerning the lives of the movie players, that a large motion picture producing company has announced that from now on all contracts drawn up with players would have what they call a "morality clause." This will be used to govern the conduct of the players off the screen as well as on—much the way such a clause in the contract of a baseball player restricts his actions off the diamond as well as on.

This is another step in the readjustment of the picture industry, and will tend to bring this rapidly growing business to a degree of "normalcy."

LEWIS SARGENT AGAIN

When the Fannie Hurst story, "Just Around the Corner," which was directed for Cosmopolitan productions by Frances Marion, is seen on local screens, it will bring back Lewis Sargent, who first made a name for himself when he played Huck Finn in the filming of the Mark Twain story.

Though Sargent's role—that of the heroine's small brother, a messenger boy—was not a big part, comparatively speaking, he did such splendid work on the set that automatically his role grew until it is one of the most prominent ones in the picture. The lead in "Just Around the Corner" is played by the "Swedish Mary Pickford," Sigrid Holmquist, while Miss Marion's husband, Fred Thompson, is seen opposite her.

DORIS KENYON BUSY

PLAYING leads in pictures isn't enough for Doris Kenyon. This tireless player has completely revised her book of poems, published several years ago, and is ready to have them re-published in an enlarged form.

Further than this, she is preparing for another stage engagement and will be seen on Broadway stage and screen, as well as bookshop, during the coming season.

NAZIMOVA SIGNS

THE information given out regarding the future activities of Madame Nazimova have been authorized, but it was stated that nothing definite had been accomplished. That is, she had signed no contract.

Today we hear that she has signed on the dotted line with Hiram Abrams, head of United Artists' Corporation, to release her independent productions as they are handling those of David Wark Griffith, Douglas Fairbanks and Mary Pickford. Her first production will be, as I have already announced in this column, a repertory program of Ibsen's "A Doll's House," and Oscar Wilde's "Salome." She is preparing to start work on these immediately.

"ROBINSON CRUSOE" COMING.

WHO SAID "BUSINESS DEPRESSION?"

IN the midst of all this talk along Film Row that there is a serious depression in the industry comes word from Buffalo, New York, that safe-crackers in that city robbed a picture theatre of $1,650.

JACKIE SAUNDERS ON STAGE.

JACKIE SAUNDERS, one-time picture star and since her "comeback" to the screen a successful 'heavy,' has signed up with A. H. Woods to appear on Broadway in one of his productions during this Winter.

Miss Saunders is on her way East from Hollywood with her daughter, Jaqueline, Jr., and will make her home in New York in the future. The Los Angeles papers say that Miss Saunders and her husband, E. D. Horkheimer, a motion picture producer, have decided to separate.

CAMERA CLICKS.

OWEN MOORE is back on the Selznick lot ready to start work on his next picture, "Love Is an Awful Thing." It was rumored that Moore's bride, Kathryn Perry, would play the lead, but nothing definite has been learned.

MAX LINDER is making the burlesque on Doug Fairbanks' film, "The Three Musketeers." It will be known as "Three Musketeers and a Half."

EDWARD KIMBALL has "made good" to such an extent in

ANNA G. NILSSON, Norman Kerry and Corinne Barker have been chosen for the leads in the film version of "Three Live Ghosts," now being made in Lasky's London studio by George Fitzmaurice.

LEXINGTON PASTOR'S DAUGHTER TO WED

The Rev. and Mrs. John Mills Wilson of No. 63 Hancock street, Lexington, announce the engagement of their daughter, Miss Dorothy Wilson, to Leon Summers, son of Mrs. Annie Summers of No. 79 Roberts street, Roslindale. Mr. Summers is connected with the American Thread Company. Mr. Wilson is minister of the Lexington First Parish Unitarian Church.

'MUSKETEERS' EXACT AS TO DETAIL

Tons of Books Consulted by "Doug" to Secure Customs in Year 1627

They used to call the field where the Fairbanks film was being photographed in Los Angeles the "Literary Lot" because the place was absolutely strewn with book of reference, histories and romances during the making of "The Three Musketeers."

No less than fifteen hundred volumes were consulted, which Hector Fuller, the press agent and statistician, declares to amount to two tons of books, or about 30,000,000 words.

Of course Fairbanks and his assistants did not read all these books from cover to cover. They looked things up in them. Such as, for instance, how a sword hilt should be trimmed, or what kind of painting was hanging in the dining room of Cardinal Richelieu, if any, or whether men wore lace or brocaded collars in the good year of 1627.

How did one approach the royal presence in the days of the great cardinal. What sort of salute was used. Did one fall on the ground, or walk up and shake hands saying, "Hello, king, how are you today?"

"It is astonishing," declares Mr. Fuller, "how little exact information of this sort has ever been written down. Historians contented themselves with recording events, not manners and customs.

"Fairbanks, as D'Artagnan, was puzzled by the nature of the boots they wore in those days and he didn't know whether a shirt or a leather jerkin was the proper thing to wear.

"It is one thing to read in Dumas that D'Artagnan entered an inn and ordered a meal, but what did the inn look like and what sort of food was served, and how did they eat it. These things had to be ascertained with accuracy.

"In the old days of the movies none of the directors ever worried much about such things. They just did the best they could. But as they were apt to be persons of little education and culture their results were often ludicrous, being full of solecisms and anachronisms. Fairbanks was determined that nobody, whether college professor or critic, should point out incongruities in his picture of France in 1627."

MAN BEATEN WITH HAMMER SHIELDS FOE

John George Brown, forty-one years old, of No. 1258 Columbus avenue, Roxbury, was taken to the City Hospital suffering from a dozen or more wounds about his head and face, the result, he declares, of an attack by a neighbor who wielded a heavy hammer with telling effect. He refuses to give the name of his assailant. The police are making an investigation.

BREAKS LEG BY TWIST IN RAILROAD TRACKS

John J. Kelley of No. 12 Water street, Arlington, while on the way home from his restaurant, turned his ankle on the Boston & Maine Railroad tracks, on which he was walking. In taking a short cut to his home from work, resulting in the breaking of his right leg. He was found writhing in pain by a milkman and was removed to the Symmes Arlington Hospital.

COTTON CROP TO BE POOREST IN HISTORY

Boll Weevil and Bad Weather Reported to Have Caused Heavy Losses

Washington, Oct. 3.—Cotton crop conditions are worse today than at any similar period in the history of the cotton growing industry, according to a report today by the Department of Agriculture.

Poor weather conditions and the boll weevil menace, now reported to have covered nearly the entire cotton belt, were given as the causes for the extreme poor conditions.

The condition was today reported as 42.2 per cent. of normal, which is 12.2 lower than the average.

Now a Folly to Have Corns

Millions of People Know an Easy Way to End Them—Quick and Sure

FOLKS all about you now treat corns in this scientific way. That's why corns are becoming so uncommon. At the first corn pain they apply Blue-jay—the liquid or the plaster—for sale at all druggists. The pain stops instantly. Soon the whole corn gently loosens and comes out.

This is not like old ways, harsh and crude. It is the modern method, put out by a laboratory of world-wide repute.

For millions of people it has solved the corn problem. It will bring you freedom—and forever—when you know it. For your own sake, find this out tonight.

2000 MORE DOCK WORKERS QUIT IN NEW YORK

Officials of Longshoremen's Union Unable to Make Men Return; 15,000 Now Out

By International News Service.

New York, Oct. 3.—While union officials were decrying the unauthorized walkout, 2,000 additional longshoremen went on strike in Hoboken today, completely tying up that important section of New York harbor.

Contrary to expectations, none of the Chelsea dock workers returned to work today. At noon it was estimated that 15,000 longshoremen had quit work so far.

A dozen large ships were tied up at the Hoboken waterfront as a result of the strike called by the men themselves because of wage cuts and alleged "speeding up" of work.

A detachment of the 13th Infantry under Major Garrison was called out today and placed on guard duty along the army piers. It was stated the soldiers would handle no baggage or freight, but would protect government property.

Heavy police guards also were placed along the various piers.

An emergency crew recruited in Manhattan to go to Hoboken and load the George Washington failed to report for work. Steamship officials said the emergency workers had been intimidated.

BODY OF UNIDENTIFIED MAN FOUND IN DOORWAY

Police are investigating the finding of the body of an unidentified man, about twenty-eight years old, in a doorway at No. 15 A street, South Boston, early today. The man was pronounced dead at the City Hospital and the body was removed to the Southern Mortuary. Foul play is not suspected. He was about five feet ten inches in height, weighed 175 pounds, was of medium complexion, brown-haired and wore a dark blue suit, green cap and brown shoes.

Second week of the Boston American's $1,500 Name-this-Auto Competition. Picture No. 7. A car with a hyphenated name, but you will have to tell the rest of it, yourself.

The thought came to the Name-this-Auto Editor yesterday afternoon, in Harvard square, that here or hereabouts should be an ideal place to meet and identify every make of car known to Americans. IS there a car, of any make, that is not known to Massachusetts avenue?

Naming the cars is not difficult and the writer will not be very much surprised if many of the well informed folk who are taking part in this competition do not prove their ability to identify practically every picture. A dangerous thing to do in these contests—as many who took part in the Play Title Test and the Song Title Test can testify—is to "change" a title once you have decided upon it. Before you amend one of your identifications, be positive that your second judgment is better than your first.

TASK IS EASY.

The Name-this-Auto Test will consist of 50 pictures, each showing one of the distinctive features of a well-known automobile. The nameplate will be missing. Those who take part in the Test are asked to identify the cars shown in the pictures. At the close of the Test, they will send in the 50 Pictures, each properly identified—and after the necessary checking—the Boston American will distribute the rewards itemized in the "box" at the top of this column.

In addition to naming the motor cars—not a prodigious task, if you go about it right—every contestant will be required to write an essay (or letter) intended to boost the Walk Righ-Drive Right movement. The Boston American purposes to do one newspaper's part to lessen the appalling number of highway accidents. It wants your assistance. Every reader who has given the subject a thought has a pet plan by which streets and boulevards can be made safer for young and old, safer for the man who drives as well as for the man who walks.

ESSAY CAN WAIT.

Put these Walk Right-Drive Right ideas on paper. Not less than fifty and not more than two hundred words. But the essay can wait. There is plenty of time for that. The business of the day and the hour is to name the cars. Can you name Car No. 7? You have named it? Already? Good for you!

Tell your friends about the Name-this-Auto Competition. You pay nothing to take part in it. Just another Boston American method of making things interesting and profitable for its readers. No registration. No enrollment. No subscribing. Nothing to peddle. Nothing to pay. Name the cars!

KU KLUX PARADE SHOOTINGS TO BE PROBED

Texas Judge Orders Grand Jury to Make Searching Inquiry Into Rioting

By International News Service.

Waco, Texas, Oct. 3.—A searching Grand Jury investigation of the riot in which ten persons were wounded following a parade of the Ku Klux Klan at Lorena was ordered today by District Judge R. L. Munroe, after a conference with Frank B. Tierey, county attorney, and a committee of Lorena citizens.

Three of those wounded were in a critical condition today. Those most seriously wounded were Sheriff Robert Buchanan of McLennon County; Edward Howard, a Waco policeman; Louis Crow, a laundryman, and Carl West.

County Attorney Tierey has refused the request of a committee of citizens to file complaints against Sheriff Buchanan and Deputy Sheriff Burton, pending the outcome of the Grand Jury investigation.

A statement signed by more than 200 citizens of Lorena was issued today. It declared that the Ku Klux Klan had no intent to violate the law in holding its parade. The statement said, in part:

"We grieve for the blood that was shed. But in order that the world may know the facts, we desire to make public the following statement:

"We do not believe that the members of the Ku Klux Klan who staged the parade violated any law or that they had any intention of violating the law."

Sheriff Buchanan was shot under the right arm, the bullet probably penetrating a lung. Louis Crow was stabbed in the right chest, part of the liver and lung being pierced. Howard has a knife wound in the right side, which may have entered the abdomen. West was shot in the neck, the bullet passing through his windpipe and lodging in his body.

According to the story of the affair told by Deputy Sheriff Burton of Waco, who brought Sheriff Buchanan back to this city after the battle, he did not fire a shot until after he saw his chief fall. He then emptied his revolver into the struggling mass piled on top of the sheriff.

JAPAN LEADS IN ARMING, U. S. DATA SHOWS

Prepares at Rate Many Times Faster Than Any Other World Power

By International News Service

Washington, Oct. 3.—Figures being prepared today by government experts for use during the forthcoming armament limitation conference show Japan is arming at a furious pace, a rate many times faster than any other world power.

From a fourth rate naval power before the war, Japan has crept up until she will soon be on even footing with the United States and snapping at Great Britain's heels for naval leadership unless checked.

The figures being prepared here for use of the American delegation at the armament conference show the Japanese armament three times greater in proportion than that of any other peoples. Thirty-two cents out of every dollar of Japanese taxes go for the upkeep construction. A table of American officers and men receive.

The total of the Japanese budget also is camouflaged, according to American experts, in that it does not contain the cost of military and civil government in Korea, Formosa, and Shantung.

American observers and experts have experienced considerable difficulty in arriving at accurate figures on Japan's naval and army expenditures, because of the close secrecy which the Tokio government exercises in these matters.

Many items of naval and military expenditures are not included under their proper headings, but are instead hidden away under other headings in colonial administration, etc.

FIGURES EXPLAINED.

	TOTAL BUDGET.	NAVAL BUDGET.
Japan	$778,146,312	$273,391,395
Gt. Britain	3,504,985,789	423,848,079
United States	3,995,838,431	410,673,288
Italy	1,151,170,000	81,868,752

Although these figures show that Japan is spending less actually than Great Britain and the United States, though more in proportion to her national income, American experts said today they were wholly misleading.

If Japan's expenditures were multiplied by three, the experts say they would more nearly reflect the actual conditions, for Japan can maintain her navy and build new battleships at about one-third what it costs the United States. Cheap labor, cheaper materials and domestic conditions generally permit Japan to outstrip the world in economical naval construction.

LABOR CHEAP IN JAPAN.

Japanese workers received about one-third what American labor receives, while the rate of pay for Japan's officer class and enlisted strength is about one-fourth what American officers and men receive.

The total of the Japanese budget also is camouflaged, according to American experts, in that it does not contain the cost of military and civil government in Korea, Formosa, and Shantung.

Connecticut Women Sure of Electing 200 Officers

Hartford, Ct., Oct. 3.—The women of Connecticut have in the past few weeks proved themselves to be alive as far as politics are concerned, and according to the returns of the canvasses at the Secretary of State's office, over 200 will be elected to office next Monday, no matter how the towns go.

Connecticut has a minority party law in town elections that allows the winning party two-thirds and losing party one-third of most of the boards of officers, and the women have arranged it that they are sure of fully 200 being elected.

One notable example is the little town of Lisbon, where both parties have nominated five women for Grand Jurors, and seven of the ten women are elected before they go to the polls.

ONE-MAN CARS BOYCOTTED IN HYDE PARK

Free Jitney Rides Provided in "Rebellion" Against 20-Cent Fares

With free jitney service provided by indignant citizens, Eastern Massachusetts one-man trolley cars went literally empty from Cleary square, Hyde Park, to the old Hyde Park-Easton line today.

The few persons who used the trolleys were hissed and jeered by the crowds that lined the streets and piled into the free jitneys.

The grievance that caused the "rebellion" is the 20 cent fare that residents of Hyde Park are compelled to pay to get "in town." The Eastern Massachusetts operates the link that connects the district with the Boston Elevated, and riders are compelled to give ten cents to the Eastern and then a dime more to the Elevated.

Hyde Park residents say this is an injustice, in view of the fact that the Legislature gave Mayor Peters permission to have the Elevated operate its cars in Hyde Park, its city to relieve the company for loss of revenue.

Prosperous residents of the town manned their own autos, carrying them "full up" into town, and then back again to Cleary square, where they loaded up again. Others carried loads of passengers from Cleary square to Readville. Ten autos were in operation with big signs saying "Free Jitney Service to City Line."

A one-man car, waiting in the sheds for ten minutes in hopes of picking up fares, started out with one passenger. He was hooted and jeered.

MOTHER OF YOUTH WHO KILLED SELF A SUICIDE

Morristown, N. J., Oct. 3.—Dying from an overdose of a sleeping powder and with both wrists slashed, Mrs. Paul C. Zuhlke, wife of a wealthy New York importer and exporter, who had been missing since Thursday, was found in a barn on the Zuhlke estate near Madison, it became known today. Mrs. Zuhlke died a few minutes after being found. The coroner declared it to be a case of suicide.

Six months ago the dead woman's son, Paul, committed suicide in the chemical laboratory of a Morristown public school by inhaling the fumes of a mixture which he had prepared.

Says Time to Make Mentho-Laxene Syrup

Anyone Can Make a Full Pint of Laxative, Curative Cold and Cough Medicine Cheaply at Home. First Dose Relieves.

Everybody is subject to colds and coughs at this season. Be prepared! Have on hand a full pint of Mentho-Laxene syrup that checks and stops coughing, relieves croup, usually brings permanent relief in a few hours. But benefits are derived if you begin taking it at the very outset of a cold or cough—before you can check or abort the cold—and save many hours of distress and perhaps ward off bronchitis, pneumonia, and other serious results of a neglected cold.

Mentho-Laxene is pure, contains no opiate or narcotics, is pleasant, penetrating, healing and curative beyond any preparation you can buy ready made. Full directions and guarantee are with every bottle of Mentho-Laxene. It will more than please you or The Blackburn Products Co., Dayton, Ohio, will refund your money.

Hundreds of thousands of bottles of Mentho-Laxene have been sold and not a "kick" has come to us. Many customers write that they have wasted time, money and suffering before they found it. 4,000 barrels used last year. Why? Because it's best and cheapest.—Adv.

Alkali in Shampoos Bad for Washing Hair

Most soaps and prepared shampoos contain too much alkali, which is very injurious, as it dries the scalp and makes the hair brittle.

The best thing to use is Mulsified cocoanut oil shampoo, for this is pure and entirely greaseless. It's very cheap and beats anything else all to pieces. You can get Mulsified at any drug store, and a few ounces will last the whole family for months.

Simply moisten the hair with water and rub it in, about a teaspoonful is all that is required. It makes an abundance of rich, creamy lather, cleanses thoroughly, and rinses out easily. The hair dries quickly and evenly, and is soft, fresh looking, bright, fluffy, wavy and easy to handle. Besides, it loosens and takes out every particle of dust, dirt and dandruff. Be sure your druggist gives you Mulsified.—Advertisement.

NUXATED IRON

If you are not strong or well you owe it to yourself to make the following test: see how long you can work or how far you can walk without becoming tired. Next take two Nuxated Iron tablets three times per day for two weeks. Then test your strength again and see how much you have gained. Many people have made this test and have been astonished at their increased strength. Nuxated Iron is guaranteed to give satisfaction or money refunded. At all good druggists.

DE VALERA AND GRIFFITH IN HARMONY

Walsh Shows Why Reports to Contrary Have No Basis in Fact

What manner of men are Eamon De Valera and Arthur Griffith in Irish eyes?

Is Ireland united behind them? Is there friction between them?

These are the questions that Frank P. Walsh, chairman of the War Labor Board and American Commissioner on Irish Independence, discusses and answers in this, the second of a series of articles on the Irish situation today, written for Universal Service.

By FRANK P. WALSH
(Written Expressly for Universal Service.)

New York, Oct. 3.—America often raises Irish questions that are unknown in Ireland itself. When I returned to America the other day I was astonished to learn that there was speculation in this country as to whether President De Valera was the real head of the Irish Republican government or only a figurehead for some mightier man. I was amazed when I heard it suggested that Arthur Griffith was the mainspring of the movement and that there were indications of discord between them.

I heard no such suggestions in Ireland. I can only believe that in this country they were the vaporings of monarchist minds. Anyone who knows De Valera and Griffith knows better than to fancy a conflict between them. Anyone who has watched the developments of the Irish situation for the past few years must know that De Valera is President in fact as well as in name.

UNITY IS INCOMPARABLE.

Americans know De Valera. They have heard him. They have seen him. He has proved himself a soldier, a scholar and a statesman. To clear the atmosphere at once, let me make this statement without qualification:

Under De Valera, the Irish people have spoken with a unanimity, in the election of representatives and in the passage of proposals submitted to them, such as has not been paralleled by any free nation of the world.

That is a far-flung superlative statement. Yet, on that statement, I challenge any election for President ever held in the United States by the people. I challenge also the returns from any vote on a constitutional amendment in any State of the United States!

EVEN CLERGY SINN FEIN.

And remember, when you consider it, that the proposals submitted to the people of Ireland under De Valera were vital proposals, not academic legislation. They were not merely vital to the life of the nation, but vital to the life of every man who cast a vote. These men who voted with such splendid self-sacrificing patriotism for a republic offered their lives for that cause. And the vote was virtually unanimous. There has never been anything like it in the world.

A few years ago Ireland was divided politically into Unionists, Home Rulers and Fenians, as the proponents of physical force were called. Now Ireland is Sinn Fein. Even the clergy are Sinn Fein. That may stir a smile among those who have been misled into the belief that the clergy of Ireland constitutes the backbone of the Sinn Fein movement.

EXPLAINS RELATION.

The fact is that the clergy were among the last to be won over, and not all of them are completely won over yet. There are conservatives still. But more of that later.

To understand the extraordinary relation between De Valera and Griffith, you must go back of the present into the past of a few years. De Valera, a modest professor of mathematics, went into the Easter rising of 1916 as a private in the Irish Republican army. He fought in the streets of Dublin. He was one of those who held a bridge near Boland's mill, where the mortality among the British military was greater than at any other point.

Arthur Griffith, too, is a scholar and of him it may be said truly, a scholar and a gentleman. He is a man of beautiful simplicity of life and manners. No man in the Dail works so hard, so patiently, so uncomplaining. First at a meeting, last to leave, and ever eager to be of the least help to anyone on any question. No matter is too small or too great for Arthur Griffith to give attention.

RETIRES FOR DE VALERA.

When the question of organization came up, De Valera told his associates that there was no man in Ireland for the presidency more worthy and more fitted than Arthur Griffith, and he had no difficulty winning every vote on that point. Every vote but the vote of Griffith for, when the latter heard of it, before the election of the officers, he went to De Valera and said, in effect:

"This must not be. You are offering me what would be the greatest honor that could come in my life, if I could accept it, but I cannot. Until after the Easter rebellion, I was a pacifist. I was not converted to physical force until I saw my friends murdered in cold blood by British bullets. But you, De Valera, were a soldier from the beginning. You have already won victory in the field of battle. There is nothing that I can do that you cannot do better. So the greatest honor that you can grant me is to be permitted to name you for the presidency of the Republic of Ireland."

THEIR FRIENDSHIP BEAUTIFUL

And Arthur Griffith would not accept any but an affirmative answer. Let those who talk of discord between these two great men reflect on that statement of fact. For there never was a more beautiful friendship on earth between men than between De Valera and Griffith, and the spirit runs through the whole De Valera cabinet, the spirit of comradeship, respect and affection.

JAP MIGRATION PROBLEM FOR U. S. PARLEY

Tokio Paper Says It Will Be Frankly Submitted by Mikado's Delegates

Tokio, Oct. 3 (By the Associated Press.)—Japan's problem of finding an outlet for her increasing population will be frankly submitted at the conference on limitation of armaments and Far Eastern questions at Washington, it is declared by the Asahi Shimbun of this city.

The newspaper says the government will emphasize the urgency of extending economic opportunities for the welfare of the increasing millions of Japanese.

For the purpose of increasing facilities for communication with American during the conference, it is reported Japan, by agreement, will reconnect the interrupted Guam-Yap cable, and that experts will be dispatched to make adjustments. Messages from Tokio to and from Yap will be transmitted over the cable, which at one time landed at Shanghai, but which was diverted during the war to the Loochoo Islands, between Japan and Formosa.

This plan is intended to relieve the congestion on the cable between Tokio and Guam, which runs by the way of the Bonin Islands.

Japan's suggestions as to the agenda of the conference will be extended, it is claimed by the Hochi Shimbun, which declares it will consist of more than seventy items.

Ruddy Cheeks—Sparkling Eyes —Most Women Can Have

Says Dr. Edwards, a Well-Known Ohio Physician

Dr. F. M. Edwards for 17 years treated scores of women for liver and bowel ailments. During these years he gave to his patients a prescription made of a few wholesome vegetable ingredients mixed with olive oil, naming them Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets. You will know them by their olive color.

These tablets are wonder-workers on the liver and bowels, which cause a normal action, carrying off the waste and poisonous matter in one's system.

If you have a pale face, sallow look, dull eyes, pimples, coated tongue, headaches, a listless, no-good feeling, all out of sorts, inactive bowels, you take one of Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets nightly for a time and note the pleasing results.

Thousands of women and men take Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets—the successful substitute for calomel—now and then just to keep them fit. 15c and 30c.

Try This If You Have Dandruff

There is one sure way that never fails to remove dandruff completely and that is to dissolve it. This destroys it entirely. To do this, just get about four ounces of plain, ordinary liquid arvon; apply it at night when retiring; use enough to moisten the scalp and rub it in gently with the finger tips.

By morning, most if not all, of your dandruff will be gone, and three or four more applications will completely dissolve and entirely destroy every single trace of it, no matter how much dandruff you may have.

You will find, too, that all itching and digging of the scalp will stop instantly, and your hair will be fluffy, lustrous, glossy, silky and soft, and look and feel a hundred times better.

You can get liquid arvon at any drug store. It is inexpensive, and four ounces is all you will need. This simple remedy has never been known to fail.—Advertisement.

MEN'S 'FASHION SHOW' OPENS TODAY

"World's Wardrobe" Feature to Mark Unique Exposition in Mechanics Building

"The Men's Fashion Town" opened for five days of active business in the Mechanics Building today. This is the first men's apparel show ever held in New England and hundreds of retail dealers from all the New England States were on hand when the doors were opened.

Mayor Peters welcomed the general public and the dealers to the show and Governor Cox and Lieutenant Governor Fuller are both down for addresses before the show comes to an end Friday night.

Probably the most spectacular feature of the exposition, which is being held under the auspices of the Man's Apparel Club of New England, is the "World's Wardrobe," which shows the evolution of clothes from the dawn of history to the present day.

STUDENTS IN EXHIBIT.

Students from Harvard, Tufts, Boston University and Northeastern College play the roles of "fashion plates" in this feature. The "World's Wardrobe" also shows the evolution of women's dress, and many pretty New England girls have been engaged to aid in this phase of the show.

The setting of the exposition has been arranged on a novel plan. Natty display shops with red tiled roofs take the place of the customary booths. Each shop has a display window "trimmed" exactly along the lines of the big store.

PUBLIC GARDEN SHOWN.

All are built round a miniature reproduction of Boston's Public Garden, with fountain in the centre of a real pond, which is spanned by a rustic bridge.

Radiating from this "common" are the other streets of the town, each with their own shops.

The main object of the display, say the backers of the idea, is to bring the clothing business back to "normalcy," and to bring dealers and manufacturers together under one roof.

PUBLIC LIBRARY SPANISH COURSES OPEN TONIGHT

A large class will be enrolled in the State university extension course in conversational Spanish to be given at the Boston Library this week. It is estimated from the inquiries and enrollments already received at the State House. According to an announcement just made, the first meeting of the class, which will be held this evening, will be open to all who are interested in the subject. A section for advanced students will be held in the lecture hall of the Library at 7 p. m., and a section for beginners will be held at 8.

FIVE CHARGES AGAINST ROXBURY BROTHERS

Charged with attempting to rescue a prisoner, the larceny of a policeman's revolver and assault and battery on Patrolman Fortin, John Doyle of Shirley street, Roxbury, was in Roxbury Court today. He pleaded not guilty and was held for a hearing October 11. His brother pleaded not guilty to assaulting the same officer and to a drunkenness charge. His hearing will be on the same date. Officer Fortin arrested John Doyle after a stiff fight with a gang.

CHASED BY JOY AND GLOOM FOR 24 HOURS

"The hangover" from the liquor he absorbed while on a party Saturday afternoon lasted Joseph McEnroy of Cochituate twenty-four hours, according to the story he told in the Newton Court today. He passed through several stages, he explained. First he was pugnacious. Later he became sleepy and crawled into the ash bin of a house on Boylston street, where he was found singing joyously. The final stage, he said, came with his awaking in the Newton police station. The judge fined him $16.

"Prices realized on Swift & Company sales of carcass beef in Boston for week ending Saturday, Oct. 1st on shipments same ranged from 3.50 cents to 15.75 cents per pound and averaged 13.87 cents per pound."—Advt.

HEAD OF JAP DELEGATION TO PARLEY IS A PACIFIST

Tokio, Oct. 3.—Prince Iyesato Tokugawa, who will head the Japanese delegation to the Washington conference on limitation of armaments and Far East problems, today proclaimed himself a pacifist. "It is too much to expect that limitation of armaments will end wars but the conference will lessen the risks of international conflicts," said Prince Tokugawa. "We must be slow to believe evil of others. Japan is misunderstood when she is denounced as a militaristic nation."

SOUTH BOSTON MAN WEDS NEW YORK GIRL

Miss Florence Madeleine Abren of New York, niece of Mr. and Mrs. August Byer of Providence, R. I., was married yesterday noon to James Edward Clarke, Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. James E. Clarke of No. 17 Swallow street, South Boston, by the Rev. Robert Walker, a friend of the bridegroom's family, and formerly rector of the Church of the Ascension in East Cambridge. The ceremony was performed in Mr. Walker's home at No. 299 Elm street, Concord Junction. In the presence of only the immediate relatives of the bridal couple. Miss Marion Byer of Providence, a cousin of the bride, was the bridesmaid and William M. McCann of South Boston was the best man.

College Men Prove Ready Victims of Cupid's Darts

By International News Service.

Chicago, Oct. 3.—Dan Cupid, he of archer fame, is being aided by higher education if statistics compiled by the University of Chicago are a just criterion. For—

More than 11 per cent. of the men graduates of the University of Chicago marry or become engaged within the first year after their graduation. Of the 165 men graduated from the university a year ago in June, according to the statistics which were compiled by the class of 1920, twenty-one succumbed to the diminutive Dan's darts ere a twelve-month had elapsed.

Truly, youth learns more than Greek and logic in the well-known academic halls.

VICTIM PLEADS FOR ACCUSED IN COURT

Roderick Finan of Waltham appeared in the Newton Court today to plead for the dismissal, without punishment, of Angelo Nebretti of Cook street, Newton, charged with having looted Finan's automobile abandoned on the Sudbury road Saturday night. In spite of the pleas of the owner of the car, a fine of $25 was imposed upon Nebretti and he was ordered to make good the property taken from the abandoned auto.

VICTIMS GONE AS AMBULANCE ARRIVES

Weston, Waltham and Newton Police Have Mystery Hunt for "Dying" Men in Auto Crash

Police of Weston, Newton and Waltham were baffled today by a combination of a mysterious automobile accident, two supposedly dying men who walked away while an ambulance was being rushed to them, and the appearance of one of them several hours later in Newton, unmarked, and denying that he was ever in the accident.

The mishap occurred at Cutter's Corner in Weston, when an automobile believed to have been driven by Thomas Burke, a Newton fireman, caromed off a stone-wall and was "side-swiped" by another machine.

Some time later another outoist telephoned the Weston authorities, and an ambulance was sent.

Tierney was found unconscious in the road, and two other men, apparently badly injured, lay a few feet away. As Tierney's condition seemed the most serious he was taken to Waltham Hospital at once, while the other two were laid gently on the grass to await the return of the ambulance.

But when the ambulance got back the two "cases" had gone and for hours search for either of them was fruitless.

Tierney, when he gained consciousness, said that the third man was John Nolan of Newton.

Burke was found in Newtonville square this morning. He admitted that the machine was his but maintained somebody borrowed it and forgot to return it yesterday and that he was not in the accident.

What became of Nolan, nobody knows.

WEBSTER YOUTH KILLED BY AUTO THAT FLEES

Webster, Oct. 3.—Stanley Majewski, nineteen years old, died in St. Vincent's Hospital, Worcester, as the result of injuries received when he was run down by an automobile. The driver of the automobile did not stop, but speeded his car and disappeared. The accident took place in the outskirts of Dudley.

Teeth You Love to Show

Find out how millions get them

This offer is to women who desire to look their best. To men who find that tobacco stains, etc., make their teeth look dingy. To young folks who know what beauty lies in glistening teeth.

It is to all who have learned that old methods are wrong. And that, despite the tooth brush, teeth discolor and decay.

Clouded by a film

Teeth are clouded by a dingy film. At first it is viscous—you can feel it. It clings to teeth, gets between the teeth and stays.

Old ways of brushing do not effectively combat it. Much of the film remains. Then night and day it may do ceaseless damage. Most tooth troubles are now traced to film, and those troubles have been constantly increasing.

It is the film-coats that discolor, not the teeth. Film is the basis of tartar. It holds food substance which ferments and forms acid. It holds the acid in contact with the teeth to cause decay.

Germs breed by millions in it. They, with tartar, are the chief cause of pyorrhea. Also of other serious troubles, local and internal.

Science combats it

Dental science, after long research, has found ways to combat film. Able authorities have amply proved them. Now leading dentists, here and abroad, advise their daily use.

These effective methods are embodied in a dentifrice called Pepsodent. Thus one may twice a day apply them in a most delightful way. Millions already do this, and to them it has brought a new era in teeth cleaning.

Three other effects

Modern authorities find that a tooth paste should also bring other effects. This to cope with the average diet, rich in starch and low in fruit acids.

So Pepsodent stimulates the salivary flow—Nature's great tooth-protecting agent. It multiplies the starch digestant in the saliva—put there by Nature to digest starch deposits that cling. It multiplies the alkalinity of the saliva—Nature's neutralizer of the acids which cause decay.

These are natural results, but modern diet often fails to bring them. This tooth paste brings them, at least twice a day.

Note the white teeth

Note the glistening teeth you see. Ask how people get them. You will find, we think, that most of them are due to Pepsodent.

But this is more than a question of beauty. Those whiter teeth mean cleaner, safer teeth. To young and old they mean better tooth protection.

It means more to children than adults. Young teeth are most easily attacked. Very few children escape. So dentists advise that Pepsodent be used from the time the first tooth appears.

Let one person try it in your home. Then show the results to all.

You'll quickly see

The Pepsodent results are very quickly apparent. Some are almost instant. A ten-day test is usually convincing.

Send the coupon for a 10-Day Tube. Note how clean the teeth feel after using. Mark the absence of the viscous film. See how teeth whiten as the film-coats disappear. Watch the other good effects.

The test will be a revelation. The book we send will explain each new effect. Then judge by results, and their scientific basis, what is best for you and yours. Cut out the coupon so you won't forget.

NOTORIOUS GUNMAN CHEATS GALLOWS AND IS DECLARED INSANE

WATCH YOUR STROKE, CECIL! Miss Leitch, holder of women's golf championship of England, France and Canada, today opened her drive for American title at Deal, N. J. Snapped making one of her long strokes. (Int.)

MATVAIEF (right) is Minister of War for Chita, new Republic, between Japan and Soviet Russia, which refuses to disarm. Won't send envoy to conference here. (K.)

A RISE IN LEATHER! Thornton, Columbia University's fullback, is one of the cleverest punters in college football and if expressions count for anything, Columbia's rivals had better watch out. He has just lifted a long punt. (U. & U.)

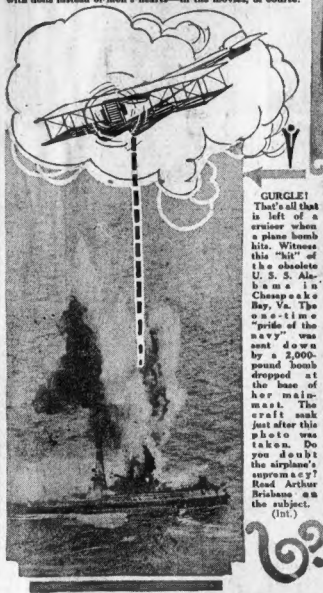
SAUCY, BUT SIMPLE! One of the latest Fall models is this charming hat of cochin peons velvet, with the brim rolling smartly high on one side and drooping gracefully on the other. Trimmed about the crown and a soft plume drooping from under the brim completes the picture. (Bain.)

SERVICE! Reginald Jouney of Boston caught just as he was delivering a swift one during a match at Hot Springs, Va. (U. & U.)

AND ALONG CAME RUTH! A charming and intimate study of Ruth Roland, who, when she isn't flickering in the films, likes to remember her kidhood days, when she played with dolls instead of men's hearts—in the movies, of course.



GURGLE! That's all that is left of a cruiser when a plane bomb hits. Witness this "hit" of the obsolete U. S. S. Alabama in Chesapeake Bay, Va. The one-time "pride of the navy" was sent down by a 2,000-pound bomb dropped at the base of her mainmast. The craft sank just after this photo was taken. Do you doubt the airplane's supremacy? Read Arthur Brisbane on the subject. (Int.)

A BIT UPPISH! In fact Jan Van Albert is up 9 ft. 5 in. He may visit Boston in his tour of the country. Lew Ross, the little chap standing beside him, is a mere 6 ft. high. Jan has to lash two beds together in order to sleep. (Int.)

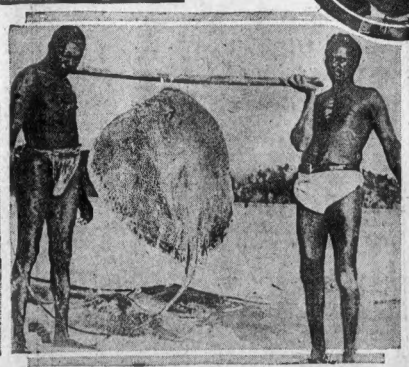
GENE GEARY, Chicago gunman, who escaped gallows on several occasions, has been declared insane after conviction for first degree murder. (U. & U.)

NICE PUSSY! Countess Serch, now of Kenwood, Cal., was admired for bringing this animal into a San Francisco hotel—until it was learned that he was a leopard. (Int.)

MRS. LOCHINVAR Comes Out of West! Lorena Trickey, champion woman rider of the West, has just come East to receive the McAlpin trophy, won by her at the Cheyenne roundup. (K. & H.)

A NEW SPORT OF THE NORTH! Did you ever hear of harpooning polar bears? On the coast of Alaska, Uncle Sam's wards, the Eskimos, take great delight in running down one of the big fellows and hurling a sharp harpoon into him, with a terrific battle ensuing. It is hardly a sportsmanlike sport, but the natives find it thrilling. When told that killing the animal in the manner is cruel they reply that when they are shot in the ice floes they sink beneath the water and die a lingering death, whereas the harpoon holds them until they can be brought aboard ship and speedily dispatched. Photo shows a bear just after he was harpooned. (Int.)

MEMORIES OF TOD SLOAN! Buddy Ensor, skilful jockey, has been suspended by the Saratoga Association for failure to keep himself in condition. (Int.)



HERE'S what Nantasket thought it had last Summer! The fish shown on the pole between these two cannibals of Northwest Australia is the stingray—one of the largest ever caught and very poisonous. This photo was made by an exploration party, which has returned with many scientific discoveries. (Int.)

HOME, JAMES, and make it snappy! Master Rutherford Mitch, nephew of Mrs. William K. Vanderbilt of New York, owns the smallest auto in Paris. The vehicle, which rides as easy as a regular car, is operated by pedals. Snapped on his aunt's Paris estate. (K. & H.)

CASHIER SAYS LIQUOR LED TO THEFT

Bootlegging Said to Be Involved in Waverly Trust Company Robbery

Blaming bootleggers and whiskey for his downfall, Clarence O. Hill faced the Cambridge District Court today charged with the theft of $3,500 from the Waverly Trust Company, of which he was cashier.

Hill, according to Chief Argy of the Belmont police, confessed the defalcation, putting the blame up to the same cause that led to his wife divorcing him in 1916—liquor.

Arrested on the first anniversary of the trust company, Hill's confession came as a surprise to the community and officers of the bank, who had been hard at work for a year to get the bank firmly established.

That Hill's family may come forward and save the young man from a trial, was intimated today. Developments implicating leaders in an alleged "bootlegging ring" also are expected as a result of investigation by the detectives.

250,000 MARK IS PASSED IN AUTO REGISTRATION

More Than That Number of Pleasure Cars Now in Use In State

More than 250,000 pleasure automobiles have been registered in this State this year. With nearly three months to go, the registration is now 10,000 in excess of the entire year 1920.

A total of 52,000 trucks has been registered, in comparison with 49,000 in the entire two months of last year. Motorcycles total 11,000, as against 14,600 last year.

Plans for removal of the State Registry of Motor Vehicles from the State House to Commonwealth Pier were today being speeded up in the hope that the quiet would be ready on November 1, when the big drive of 1922 registrations will begin. In the last week of October blanks will be mailed to 275,000 registrants of this year. Registrations for 1922 must be made on the new blanks and none will be accepted until November 1.

That auto aristocracy, known as the "First Five Thousand" will be allowed to continue. Autos whose numbers are within the first 5,000 will be given their old plates upon application. All above 5,000 will be handed out "first come, first served."

$5,000 FOR VETERANS' MEMORIAL AT MT. HOPE

Mayor Peters sent to the city council today a message and an order for an appropriation of $5,000 for the erection of a monument for the soldier dead in Mt. Hope Cemetery. The mayor believes that the monument will be a boulder with a tablet upon which will be inscribed the names of the world war soldiers who were killed. It is understood that the City Art Commission is opposed to the boulder idea for soldiers' memorials.

SHOT DOG, FINED $20 FOR CRUELTY

Mrs. Martha Edmands, of Robinhood road, Ashburndale, today accused Edward Houston, her neighbor, with cruelty to Mrs. Edmands' pet dog. "He shot my dog," said she, "but did not kill him and the police had to finish him. It was very bad." "He was a very naughty dog," Houston told the court. He bit and jumped at everybody, and he ate all his little chickens the day I shot him. I meant to kill him, but I missed." Fined $20" said the court. "I haven't the money," said Houston, and I have no work." "Then serve out the time."

There, every Monday, will be found the Best Recipe sent in up to the previous Tuesday and the name of the Winner of our $25.00 Prize!

A call to all the cooks of Boston.

Send in your best one!

Tell us exactly how you prepare your best dish; the one you like best; the one your husband prefers; the one the children talk about.

For the best recipe sent to us each week, the Boston American will give an order for $25 worth of groceries and provisions. For every other recipe which appeals to the judges and for which room for publication is found the Boston American will pay an honorarium of One Dollar.

Twenty-five dollars in groceries or provisions, remember, for the Best Boston Recipe of the week; One dollar for every other recipe we print.

The Rules of This Cookery Contest Are Few and Simple

1—In sending your recipe either attach a sales slip, not more than one week old, from the establishment of some dealer in foodstuffs—grocery, market, delicatessen—whose advertisement you see in the Boston American during the current week or write the name and address of the store on the same sheet with the recipe, if the dealer does not give sales slips.

2—Write upon one side of the paper only.

The winner will receive an order on the store whose sales slip or name and address is attached to the prize recipe for $25 worth of groceries and provisions.

Please give special attention, for a minute, to Rule 1. It does NOT mean that you must buy all or any of the things called for by your recipe from a Boston American advertiser or from Boston American advertisers. You may never have bought a single one of them in these places. Your recent purchase from a Boston American advertiser may be of any foodstuff, in or out of your recipe. It may be for fifty cents or for ten dollars; the amount is not important. The Prize Boston Recipe Contest has a three-fold object. We want (1) for the information and instruction of all our readers, the best recipes we can get from (2) Boston American cooks who (3) trade with Boston American advertisers.

So mothers, sisters, aunts, housekeepers, send us without delay that recipe for which you are famed among friends and kinfolk, but be sure to send along with it a sales slip not more than one week old from some establishment, dealing in foodstuffs, whose advertisement you find in the Boston American during the current week or the name and address of the dealer if he does not give sales slips.

And suit yourself about the kind of recipe you select. It may be that your baked beans are famous. John, your good man, may boast that his wife's baked beans "can't be beat" even in Boston. Perhaps there is something special in the way you prepare them. Tell us about it.

Or, possibly it is your brown bread, or your New England boiled dinner.

Pie! There's a typically New England, typically Boston article. Which is your best pie? How is it done?

Or it may be cake. It may be any of the thousand things New England women—Boston women—make better than any other women anywhere in America.

And by "Boston," of course, we mean "Greater Boston." The sales slip will tell the story. If you reside within trading distance of Boston American advertisers we shall assume—for the purposes of this contest—that you are a Bostonian.

Begin today reading the food advertisements in the Boston American. The current week's sales slip or the name and address of any grocery or provision dealer advertising in the Boston American entitles you to compete.

Send in YOUR Best Recipe today with sales slip attached or name of dealer.

All entries for the Best Boston Recipe Contest should be addressed to

FLIGHT OF GOLF BALL HAS LONG PROVED SCIENTIFIC PUZZLE

By JOCK HUTCHISON

The flight of the golf ball is of more importance than the average golfer thinks. Some of the most learned professors of science have spent no little time in reasoning out why the white sphere does this or that when flying through the air to its destination.

If our old friend Sir Isaac Newton had played golf he might have had as much entertainment out of the flight of the ball as he had with the apple.

When I was a mere lad at St Andrews, there was a very great golfer who was the idol of all of us boys. It was Freddie Tait, winner of two amateur championships who was shot at the very height of his career killed in the Boer war.

Freddie's father was a very learned professor and he used to delight to go deep into the mysteries of the game. He reasoned out the why and wherefore of golf which has always stared in addition of playing it.

Professor Tait used to say at the time that I did not grasp, but I have read it since with great interest, Professor Tait thought that no golf ball is ever sent on its course without some spin.

I am no professor and cannot affirm or dispute this statement. I believe, however, that most golf balls hit from the tee have a decided spin of some sort.

There is the ball hit with the downward glancing blow that produces the over spin. There is the ball that I used to hit from the tee and also with my brassie that had the forward spin always to the left and always more or less of a hook.

Then there is the side spin that brings about a slice. It would be pretty hard to make any drives without some admixture of this. Even ball players I am told find it impossible to throw a baseball straight any great distance. Few flies come to the outfield without some sort of curve.

All of the spins to be obtained by hitting the golf ball are of some great, use in making the various shots, and it should be part of every golfer's education to learn their uses.

Those who have had the pleasure of witnessing the fine performance of Joseph Kirkwood, the Australian champion, will readily understand what spin really means when applied by an expert.

Most golfers obtain spin accidentally. They get the habit of slicing a ball at will. Kirkwood knows more of this science than any player I ever knew, and he can demonstrate it before a gallery.

The ball that is hit from the tee with the downward swing, that is, the club coming in contact with the ball before it reaches the bottom of the arc produced by the swing is the most valuable spin one can use on the drive.

This produces the ideal ball. There is a low trajectory at first with the ball hugging the ground apparently for a gradual rise as it gains in distance.

All golfers but this way have a long carry with practically their safety from bunkers. When the force is spent the ball drops rather abruptly and there is not the run to be found from a straight hook ball the little white ball has been under perfect control and one will know exactly where to find it.

The problem that has worried a great many golfers would have tried to people golf is the application of the spin on balls and the effect is just at what point it begins to assert itself. A ball will frequently have slices on it was teed out for a certain distance absolutely straight then when it begins to lose the momentum it would seem to feel the effects of the spin and curve with the club face.

I have seen balls do this repeatedly that had all the appearance of straight balls but when nearing the end of the flight turned to the side or the other of the course they were going now with the club going true and then would swerve very little.

What is a ball's curve? This is a golf expression for hitting a ball good centre. Undoubtedly the ball that has never been touched by golf stick flies farthest out in front.

Up until last year there were many different kinds of golf balls but the standardization has taken many of them away from us. I find that very few golfers picked out the best ball to suit their game. Women players were at fault mostly.

Many of them used a very heavy ball because the best men golfers got a long distance with it. This is a great mistake. Free and hard hitting amateurs could get the best results with a small heavy ball but this would have to be hit very hard to get the desired compression for a long flight.

The woman golfer with a softer stroke could get more distance out of a ball that was wound less tightly. Her club would flatten it out more, and there would be more of a rebound.

Balls with soft covers fly further because they are more easily by a weak hitter compressed. The ball with a hard cover does not permit the clubhead to get near enough to it to make any impression.

Therefore, while a soft ball may cut easily it permits the clubhead to take hold of it better. The follow through will be longer and the flight will be greater.

It is possible to spin a soft covered ball more for this reason. A golf ball with a corrugated club produces the greatest amount of spin possible to give a ball. Hard hitters get more distance with a tightly wound ball than they would with a lighter one.

FOOTBALL PRIMER

By CHARLES E. PARKER

CHAPTER VI.

After a "kickoff," the referee—having determined which team lawfully possesses the ball and also the spot where it should be put in play—places the ball on the ground and orders play to begin.

The teams then arrange themselves in what is known as "scrimmage formation," on opposite sides of an imaginary lane, which is as wide as the ball is long and extends the width of the field and which is called the "neutral zone." This formation, by the way, is resumed at the start of each attacking play.

From the scrimmage formation the attacking team may attempt to advance the ball by any of three methods:

1. By rushing—in which one of the attacking players carries the ball.

2. By forwarding passing—in which one of the attacking players throws the ball forward and he is caught by any one of the five attacking players eligible to receive such a pass.

3. By kicking the ball.

Rushing is employed to a much greater extent than forwarding, because it seldom involves the loss of the ball to the opposing team.

Forward passing, however, plays a prominent part in the attack of most football teams, despite the fact the passes can be, and often are, intercepted by the defending team.

Kicking usually is called into play as a last resort for except when it results in a goal from the field it usually means the surrender of the ball to the defending team.

Each method is important from a tactical standpoint. If the attacking team offers but weak resistance against rushing, that type of play is assured of success, if it is weak in opposing forward passes, the latter can play a deciding part in the game, then again if the enemy is reasonably strong in both departments of defence, the two methods can be alternated in such manner that the enemy is always working under a mental strain.

As for kicking, it has both scoring and tactical advantages.

It will be remembered that two rules require the attacking team to advance the ball a total distance of at least ten yards in four plays. The ideal attack then would be one that accomplishes a ten-yards-or-greater advance in less than the limited number of plays. But this does not always happen and it is then that the kicking department is called upon.

If the attacking team is reasonably close to the defenders goal, and doubtful of making the required distance a drop-kicker or placement kicker usually attempts to score a goal from the field, while if the attacking team is far from its defender's goal or not making the required headway, the third or fourth play in the series of four usually finds a punter kicking the ball far into the defender's territory.

Perhaps it should be noted here that the attacking team remains the team in possession of the ball. Upon losing its possession, the erstwhile defenders become the attackers, while the erstwhile attackers become the defenders, and remain so until the ball again changes hands.

THREE MYSTIC VALLEY GAMES ON THIS WEEK

All six teams of the Mystic Valley Interscholastic Football league will play this week. On Friday Arlington High plays at Watertown, last year's champion. On Saturday Melrose High will play at Woburn, and Winchester High at Wakefield.

NORTH CAMBRIDGE IS BEATEN BY ST. JOHNS

B. C. AGAINST PROVIDENCE SATURDAY

Maroon and Gold Arranges Game to Be Played at University Heights

Boston College will play again on University Heights, next Saturday. A game has been arranged with Providence College and it will furnish the Maroon and Gold warriors their last chance to get into form for the game on October 15 in Texas.

Saturday's exhibition of the 1921 model machine showed that Cavanaugh has the right parts, but that the new set is needs quite a little tightening before the machine will be able to hit the high speed of last season's eleven. As was expected the Boston College line showed lack of solidarity. The backfield was fast and its work very pleasing to the coach.

Comerford and Kelley, the only regulars in the line, played a strong consistent game Comerford several times broke through and Kelley and was usually on the right spot when it came to smothering the ball.

George Kenyon's attack was of the first order but his defensive work did not measure up to his capabilities.

All the new men on the team lived up to their reputations. The only reason that they did not shine was because they had not enough practice as a team. There is little fear that one or two more games will not see the whole line working smoothly.

Ray Paten played a fine game at right tackle. Paten was one of the reasons why the heavier Boston University line was able to make first down on straight rushing only twice.

Keohane, the giant B. C. tackle, gave a fine exhibition considering his short time with the first squad. He is quick to learn his part, and proved that Cavanaugh made no mistake in advancing him to the first team.

At centre, Bill Doyle's playing was perfect. He did not make a single bad pass in the three periods that he played. Reardon, the regular centre, got into the game in the last period. His playing here was as brilliant as it was short. He tore right in a la Jack Heaphy, breaking up the B. U. attacks.

The quarterback post, which caused Cavanaugh so much worry, was filled in fine style by Steve Paten. He is cool and level headed, and played always in the right place.

The style of play used by Boston College prevented Jimmy Liston from showing his true form. Liston had the task of breaking through the B. U. line, but as C. C. line was unable to puncture the B. U. line, and Liston was usually forced to attempt to break through the B. U. lines at centre. Liston is a game fighter, and did as well as could be expected under the circumstances.

Comolli relieved Liston when he was hurt. Comolli played a slashing game, and several times carried the ball through for marked gains.

Chuck Darling did not disappoint with his kicking. In the kickoffs he was unerring, and never failed in getting his team mates out of bad holes.

At left guard, Cupie Elberry and McManus, who relieved him, played a good offensive and defensive game. McManus is bigger than Elberry and has a lot of fire when on the offensive.

Matthews, who started the game at fullback, played a first class game all the way through, and made the spectacular play of the game when he ran sixty yards with an intercepted forward for a touchdown.

Bill Sullivan, who has been on the sick list all week, replaced Matthews for a period. He played well but was not up to his usual form.

YOUNG MASCOT SURE YANKEES WILL WIN

New York, Oct. 1.—The personal winners in a race is the record of Eddie Barnett, youthful mascot of the New York American League champions, who today declared he is confident that this time he is attached to a real pennant winning club.

It was through no fault of his, he said that the two other pennants the Chicago Americans and the Brooklyn Nationals—did not reach that lofty pinnacle.

Says a Bull Fight Is All in Fun, but the Bull Can't See the Joke

In Spain they have what they call "bull fights." A guy gets a bull out in a ring and chases him around the area with a spear. This is great fun for everybody except the bull.

Before the fight is really interesting you have to make the bull mad. After you stick him three or four times he don't exactly tickled to death about it.

Every time the toreador spears him the audience applauds but the bull can't see the joke.

Before the fight starts the toreador comes out and makes a bow. Once commonly let the bull loose before the toreador finished bowing.

He was in the habit of facing the audience but after that he always faced the bull.

It's not as polite but it's more comfortable.

The toreador got sore because the bull sneaked up on him. The bull had two horns but he never blew either of them.

He had the bull by the horns but the bull wouldn't let go.

Finally the toreador used his wits and made the bull run for his life. He told the bull that Armour was in the audience.

But he lied to him because Armour was in the United States. This served the bull right for not reading the newspapers.

The idea of the game is to keep the bull from hooking you but the bull doesn't always remember this.

A good toreador will never stab the bull below the heartsteak.

Of course once in a while the Spaniard will nuss and stick the bull in the prime ribs at last.

A bull hates to go into the arena. It's very painful going from the stock yards to the stick yards.

It's all in fun, but the bull has no sense of humor.

A bull fight is always fought to a finish. They used to have ten-minute rounds, but the bull couldn't tell the time.

In Spain they make thousands of dollars by charging admission to see a bull killed. In this country they can make more money by killing the bull and charging for the meat.

HOLY CROSS HAS EVERY REASON TO BE PROUD

By CHARLES E. PARKER.

Three of them in so doing gained that inexpressible thrill that comes to little Algernon when he licks the village cut-up, while the glory of the fourth is of the same character as would be Algy's if, in failing to trounce the town terror, he did succeed in blacking one of the latter's eyes.

Amherst, Lafayette and New Hampshire State, victors Saturday over Columbia, Pittsburg and Penn State, respectively, complete the four group, while the quartet is completed by Holy Cross, whose team, although losing to Harvard 3 to 0, held its goal line inviolate against the much heavier Crimson team and outrushed and outplayed Harvard in all departments but forward passing and dropkicking.

In the case of Amherst's 6 to 0 victory over Columbia, Lafayette's 6 to 0 trouncing of Pittsburgh, and New Hampshire State's 10 to 7 triumph over the Army, pleas of unpreparedness on the part of the vanquished may be offered.

Not so in the case of Harvard, however.

Because of the Purple's display last year and its retention of the bulk of its veteran Harvard coaches, and the team itself, according to our information, viewed the then approaching Holy Cross game with merited self-confidence.

It is not often that Harvard devotes two weeks to preparation for an early season game, yet two weeks ago the Harvard second team, in giving the varsity its practice workouts, employed similar plays to those used by the Purple on Saturday.

Then, again, Percy Haughton, founder of the present and efficient Harvard system devoted all the two days in the Harvard team—and Percy, according to late reports, is no longer a professional football coach.

Nor, once the game was on, did Harvard seek to employ it as an early season workout for two or three sets of varsity substitutes as is usually the case at it is one of the year Harvard started its first string lineup and, except when individuals through minor injuries or other causes appeared unable to "stand the gaff," Crimson regulars were kept in there until the final whistle sounded.

Consequently when Holy Cross, with several players who because of lack of weight, would be classed as football misfits in many colleges, made the showing it did and missed the victory only because of lacked a dropkicker, of only average ability, Coach Crowell and his coach, Gus O'Donnell, have every reason to gloat over its prowess.

We would say the three most important elements in the Purple's successful although not winning display were: Simondinger's punting; Harvard's employment through a portion of the game of "walking end" style of wing play; and the inexperience or weakness of the Crimson tackles.

The quality of Simondinger's punting came as a general surprise to most football followers, and, undoubtedly to Harvard coaches, for until two years ago Simondinger never played football and just this year Simondinger never specialized in punting. In practice two weeks ago, he seemed to have difficulty driving the ball thirty-five yards, yet on Saturday his average was well over fifty, and he whipped one punt a distance of eighty-five yards, the ball traveling sixty-five yards in the air and rolling the remaining distance.

It is true that these kicks lacked sufficient height for the Purple ends to properly cover the receiver and very often they were run back many yards before the receiver was downed, but even so they served to give Holy Cross an even break in punting which few greated the Purple before the start of the game.

Harvard's "waiting ends" and "high-playing" tackles were repeatedly swept aside when Holy Cross employed a split play which became known as a Colgate play when Larry Bankart introduced it at that New York college.

The formation stations and end and two backs on or near the line of scrimmage, but eight or ten yards removed from one or the other of the tackles, and, in employing it, Holy Cross was able several times to turn back or split the Crimson flanks and shake the runner clear for long gains Harvard seemed to be expecting a forward pass each time the Purple took the formation and this may have accounted for its repeated success.

The Crimson attack looked more too good against the driving defence of the Purple, and although it did accomplish one impressive march of ninety sixty yards it never reached the Purple's twenty-yard line, or threatened a touchdown.

It was remarked in these columns some time ago that Harvard's most serious loss by graduation was that of Arnie Horween, interfering, line-plunging and defensive back extraordinary, and it would seem that the truth of that assertion is vouched for.

Georges Owen, who has assumed Arnie's position, displayed reasonably well defensively but the high running that goes very well behind interference, doesn't do at all for an interferer or a line plunger, and it was such a style of running that Owen employed. Again, the Newton boy has yet to display the speed that made him such a figure last season.

The able officiating of Dr. E. J. O'Brien, W. S. Cansell, G. N. Bankart and E. E. Allen, was not the least agreeable feature of the Brindisi contest.

Reports indicate that both Amherst and Lafayette outplayed as well as outscored their larger rivals of Saturday, although in Lafayette's case a Pittsburgh fumble on the latter's twenty-four-yard line paved the way to the scoring of the single Lafayette touchdown.

New Hampshire, however, confronted the Army second team in the West Point double-header for the greater part of the game and perhaps did not gain the satisfaction enjoyed by the others.

At Hanover Dartmouth was given a scare by Dave Morey's very able Middlebury team. Despite the Green's big weight advantage, the first half of the contest saw Dartmouth outplayed and out-gained by the Vermonters and facing a three-point lead. Coach Cannell and his aide must have "talked turkey" to the Hanoverians between the halves, for they became an entirely different team and had rolled up 24 points before the final whistle sounded.

The Yale Bowl game found the Elis showing excellent defensive football against Tom Kendy's University of Vermont array, and from time to time flashing an attack of considerable merit. But their display was not one over which they will greatly enthuse.

HOCKEY FANS TO GET THE BEST AT ARENA

Management Will Cater to Club, College and School-boy Competitions

Boston leads the way in hockey competition. No section in this country boasts of the well balanced competition in club, college and school hockey with which this city is favored, because the new Boston Arena, in its first year, made a special drive on hockey.

The Boston Arena caters to the colleges and schools, adopting the policy in the Boston schools to interest the masses. The Arena management devotes attention to schoolboy competition, the real foundation source and salvation of future hockey.

Last year might well be termed an experimental hockey season at the Arena. Lessons learned a year ago will be applied this season. Efficient management is the salvation of any sporting enterprise. So that hockey fans may look forward with confidence that the coming hockey season will be a banner one, during which Boston will continue to occupy the leading position in hockey circles in this country.

KANSAS IS FAVORITE FOR BOUT WITH BRITT AT THE ARENA TONIGHT

By Jack Conway

Rocky Kansas rules a betting favorite for his ten-round frolic with Frankie (Young) Britt which will be staged by the Arena A. C. at the Boston Arena tonight.

Kansas is the Babe Ruth of the boxing game. When the Buffalo warrior clouts an opponent on the well known chin, the referee usually merely has to do a little counting.

Benny Leonard was obliged to display all of his ability to gain a decision over the lad from Buffalo.

* * *

And yet the record book shows that Britt has always had a little something on Kansas. When this pair last battled in this city, Britt was in the ascendency. Even he was so far out front when the festivities ended, that Kansas announced he was going to retire. But, like other athletes who make such threats, he kept right on fighting and managed to accumulate a tidy fortune.

* * *

Kansas is confident he will win this one. He plans to try for a kayo. He believes that while he himself has improved as a combative person that Britt has gone back.

The New Bedford entry, on the other hand, is out to win all the blue ribbons. He points to the fact that he has won his last two starts, beating Young Gardwell and George Frusetti. Britt also flattened Jimmy Frusetti.

Ray Cass says there are two fighters Britt can beat any time. They are Willie Jackson and Rocky Kansas. Ray avers it is Kansas' turn to take a setback tonight.

* * *

We like Kansas' chances, but are forced to give serious consideration to Britt's former victory over the Buffalo warrior.

The semi-final of ten rounds, which will find Hambone Kelly against Jack Hamilton, is almost as much interest as the main bout.

Nobody knows just how good the Hambone is prone to be. He has been winning a flock of bouts by knockouts and has naturally looked like a wonder fighter. It's said, however, that many of Kelly's opponents have been of the setup variety. Some of the gentlemen who frequent the sporting flaits hint that Muggsy Sparks will continue to occupy the tougher opposition than Kelly which is saying a whole lot.

GIANTS MUST STOP RUTH TO WIN BIG SERIES

By NICK FLATLEY.

The shadow of Babe Ruth's big black bat obscures all else on the baseball landscape, with New York's copyrighted World Series just about to start.

Can the Giant pitchers stop the Bambino?

The answer to that question will just about decide the next champions of the baseball universe. If the big fellow steps up at the Polo Grounds during the coming fortnight, and wafts the ball casually out of the lot every so often, the American League will continue supreme.

* * * *

If, on the other fin, the slugger is set down, or passed every time he comes up there, the result is very likely to be something else again.

* * * *

Large Mister Ruth's hits have won many an important ball game for those Yankees during the campaign, and a few cleanup blows in a short series are likely to be fatal.

* * * *

The Indians tossed themselves out of the title by pitching to the Batterer in their final setto. Ruff exploded the first game with three doubles, and wrecked the second with a couple of circuit pastes, his performances then stopped all talk about his homers and his hits being registered on "groove" balls, specially served.

* * *

Ruth is likely to hit any kind of pitching, any time. He has an average for the season of .370 something; a remarkable mark anyway, all the more remarkable when you stop to consider that he never gets good balls to hit when the pitchers are in the hole. The boys, who would stick one through on any other batter, pass the Baby and let it go at that.

* * *

The threat of the Ruth homer has been one of the great factors that carried the Yankees along this season. The very same threat is bringing the Huggins crew into the series a slight favorite.

* * *

If Babe doesn't get a chance to knock the agate out of the ozone, the Giants stand a better chance to bring home the bacon for John Mcgraw's well known league than any club has had for years—since the Braves came through in '14, as a matter of fact. The notorious affair of '19 does not count, as you might say.

* * *

Defensively, McGraw has a club that is much superior to the American League entry. The New York infield is one of the very best. Frisch, Kelly and Bancroft are real stars, far and away better than their rivals on the other side. Rawlings is a useful second baseman; a fighter of the type that fits in well with brilliant sidekicks.

* * *

Pipp, Ward, Peck and McNally are quite a quartet, themselves, but they have not the speed of the infield of the Giant entry. And with the war club the latter are at least as good.

In fact they might be rated as a more consistently dangerous swatting aggregation.

* * *

The same thing holds for the gardeners, too. Burns and Young are miles ahead of Ruth, Miller and Meusel as ground coverers and fly snarers. Irish Meusel, brother of the Yank, is as good a go-getter as any of the three enemies.

* * *

All the patrols are .300 hitters, with Yankee Meusel one of the game's great sluggers, when you count the Batterer out. Back of the bat, McGraw with Snyder, Smith and Gonzalez has a much steadier corps than the American receivers, Schang and Ruether.

* * *

There are several spots in the American League defense that are likely to crack in the course of a hard, ticket series, with packed stands and wild partisanship rampant. There doesn't seem to be a chink in the Giants' fortification.

* * *

The Yankees have a bit more punch, but to counteract that, the Giants are far and away the speedier team. McNally is the one fast base runner on the Huggins roster; the National League crew has a flock of star steppers. Frisch is one of the best ever, while Burns, Young and Bancroft are exceedingly fleet.

* * *

The pennant came to New York from Cleveland through main force, the crashes of Coogan Bluffs leading an assault that gradually pulverized the opposition. The Yankees didn't and couldn't, to tell the truth, depend much on the scientific variety of game. They just blazed away, and when the hits didn't come were beaten, outrageously at times.

* * *

Against that the Giant team plays smart baseball. That's McGraw. He insists, on speed as well as punch, and he knows how to combine them, as his list of champion teams shows. The Giants, with their speed, use the hit and run more in a month than the Yanks do in a season.

* * *

Frisch and the rest of them will worry the catchers and pitchers as Ping Bodie and Huggins figure to do. That little element means a whole lot in a tight game.

* * *

The team, too, when any break means victory, that terse, the smart stuff, has more chance than the outfit that waits stolidly for the combination of base hits to bring triumph.

Those Giants, all in all, figure like a faster and keener team than the Yanks, who are likely to outhit them but, on the defense makes three, apparently as even as they ever have been in a post-season classic.

GIANTS WINNER OF SERIES IN 5 ATTEMPTS

McGraw's Clan Have Had Hard Luck in Taking Big Games

The New York Giants have won five pennants in the National League, including and since 1905, but they have been victorious in only one world's series play. McGraw won the world's title with his team in 1905 against the Philadelphia Athletics, and though he has had greater organizations since, the American league champions overcame them.

The series of 1905 consisted of five shutout games, of which the Giants won four. Christy Mathewson turned in three of the victories. Only 91,723 persons saw all five of the games and the total gate receipts were a mite over $64,000, but it was a series that will stand as one of the greatest in baseball world series history.

New York won the first game, 2 to 0, and was turned back by the same score in the second contest. They won the third, 9 to 0, the fourth, 1 to 0, and the fifth, 2 to 0.

In 1911, the Giants again met the Athletics in the series and were defeated. They won the opening game, played on their home lot, by a score of 2 to 1, and lost the second, played in Philadelphia, by 3 to 1. The third game went 11 innings and was won by the Athletics, 3 to 2. The Athletics won the fourth, 4 to 2, but New York made a great effort and won the fifth, at 16 innings by 4 to 3. The Athletics pounded out enough hits to make 13 runs in the deciding game and New York tallied but twice.

Many believed the Giants should have won from the Boston Red Sox in 1912, but the luck favored the Bostonians and they were acclaimed world's champions after eight games had been played, one a tie in eleven innings, and the final, which Boston won, 3 to 2, in ten innings. Boston won the opener, 3 to 2, and the second was a 6-6 tie. New York won the third, 3 to 1. Boston won the next two, 3 to 1 and 7 to 2 respectively. New York won the sixth and seventh, 4-3 and 11-4. The result of the eighth game already has been mentioned.

For the third time the Giants were pitted against the Athletics in a world's championship in the games of 1913 and New York took but one game of the five. They won the second game, 8 to 0, in ten innings. The Athletics won the first, 6 to 4, the third, 8 to 2, the fourth, 6 to 4, and the fifth, 8 to 1.

The Giants met the Chicago White Sox in the series of 1917, and after losing the first two games, 2 to 1 and 7 to 3, won the third and fourth by shutouts, 3 to 0 and 5 to 0. The White Sox won the fifth and the sixth, 8 to 5 and 4 to 2.

CHICAGO TO HAVE OWN CITY SERIES

Chicago, Oct. 3.—While the pennant winning Yankees and Giants are tuning up for the world's series in New York, the cubs and the White Sox today were preparing for the first city series Chicago has had since 1916. The series will start Wednesday and will continue until one team has won five victories.

The Cubs closed their season yesterday with a double victory over the Cincinnati. The Sox skimmed the Cleveland Indians in their final contest.

SHEVLIN MEETS MOHR AT FALL RIVER TONIGHT

Eddie Shevlin of Roxbury will face a tough opposition in Walter Mohr of Brooklyn whom he meets at Fall River tonight. During the last year Shevlin has defeated Marty Summers, Young Nell, Jack Perry and Steve Latso and others.

Mohr is a tough aggressive fellow who can take a punch and come back for more. He has a good record. He holds the distinction of having never been knocked off his feet.

GIANTS HAVE BIG EDGE ON YANK CATCHERS

By HUGH S. FULLERTON

THE CATCHERS

	Offensive.	Defensive.	Total.
Giants	688	793	1481
Yankees	717	705	1422

Unless the Yankees, in the final study of this series, show that they have pitching strength to overcome it, they face a handicap which seems overwhelming in the comparison of team strengths.

The Giants show a superiority in infield work, in attack and defense, which is not conclusive. They also show a slight superiority in outfield strength, and now the dope figures reveal, beyond doubt, that the Giants possess the edge in strength on the catching position, which accentuates their defensive strength.

The Giants reveal more and more strength as the study of the positions goes along. I have not yet completed the analysis of the pitching and really have no more idea than you have of the probabilities of the series beyond the fact that we now know to the best ascertainable degree the attacking and defensive strengths of both teams having dropped Cleveland and Pittsburg out of the calculations entirely.

It now becomes our grave and serious duty to decide, by the figures entirely, which team will win the world's championship. I want to state now that this is not in the interests of the gamblers who are flocking around striving to get a line on the probabilities.

The dope indicates more and more that the Giants possess the more coherent and the steadier defensive outfit and that the Yanks have the edge on long distance driving and upon sheer power.

It is another test of brute strength and skill. There is no longer any doubt that the Giants have the skill, the speed and the science of the game behind them.

This is not my idea, but the fact driven home by the study of the dope.

In the assay of the catchers we run up against another one of those queer angles of the dope which puzzles me. It is to judge relative worth of ball players.

There are so many things entirely outside the native ability of a player which may increase or decrease his worth to his club that a man may figure a thousand points stronger if playing with one club than he does when he is figured as part of the machine of another club.

In studying Schang, for instance, as compared directly with Snyder, we would immediately jump to the conclusion that Snyder is the better hitter and the better man in attack.

The official figures seem to indicate that are a fact, whereas if you analyze the figures closely and study the nature and kind of hits the two men make, Schang gets the call by quite a considerable margin.

The advantage for Schang in the attacking department is due to his tremendous speed in the first place and his terrific hitting power in the second.

The fact is that in a series such as we now consider one long smash covers a multitude of weaknesses. Schang is not a great hitter, but he is a dangerous hitter—one who is liable to break up a game almost any time.

This is true, too, of Snyder in a lesser degree. But when we figure the kind of pitching the rival catchers will face in this series we must figure that the Yanks have a big jump on the attacking advantage.

We cannot figure the normal hitting power of the catchers, but must figure what Snyder will hit against Mays, Hoyt, etc., and what Schang will hit against Nehf and Toney.

In fact, the more closely we study this situation the more evident it becomes that the result is going to centre largely around Toney.

If, he, with his waste speed and his slow twisting curve can check up the Yanks, then the figures stand true to form.

If he cannot, then the chances of the dope being unleashed and smashed to pieces are good.

Schang, in fact, is a very bad catcher. He started in the major leagues looking as if he would be one of the greatest catchers in the world, and he never has been as good a catcher since as he was in his first year. But he can hit, and he has tremendous power and speed.

He is not a good man handling pitchers, nor a skillful director of field generalship. So that, when we come to study comparative strengths of the catchers, we find the Giants again in the lead.

We need not figure much further than a straight comparison between Schang and Snyder, who will, beyond doubt do the great bulk of the catching. Smith, who lacks the experience and the brain quickness of Snyder, probably will be in part of the series, but it is very doubtful whether the Yankees will use any save Schang.

If they do they will swing in a new man after the game is settled one way or the other, and the great chance for Devormer to break in lies in an injury to Schang.

As we figure this way, we must calculate in advance what the strategy of the opposing teams will be.

The Yanks, in truth, have small chance to use any strategy whatever. They must stand fast-footed and hit and hit and hit. The Giants must use their dash and rushing attack to break the Yankee defence and upset their pitchers. There is no dope in this: it is the only way they can play ball—because it is the kind of ball their men can play.

In this sort of an attack of course, Schang's long hitting may count. He may get hold of a couple and break up ball games. Snyder, while something of the same sort of hitter, is not so liable to make long drives. In the figures the fact is revealed that Snyder is the better pinch hitter.

In the next article we will study the pitchers and sum up the team strengths of the rival teams. That will decide the question of which team is the better for purposes of a nine-game series.

60 Homers in 1922 New Record Mark for Babe Ruth

New York, Oct. 3.—Babe Ruth, home run king and star batsman of the 1921 American League champions, today announced his 1922 batting campaign plans. Ruth, whose 59th home run yesterday was one short of the season mark he had set for himself, said he would make another effort to reach the three-score total next year.

"We'll go gunning for that sixty mark next season," the Yankee slugger declared, "and I have a sneaking hunch that I'll make it."

Ruth's 1921 record is five better than his 1920 performance

FIRST CALL FOR CREW CANDIDATES AT PENN

Philadelphia, Oct. 3.—The first call for University of Pennsylvania crew candidates was issued today by Coach Wright. A number of veterans are back in college and Wright said the prospects for a good crew are better than last year. All the Fall drills will be held on the upper Schuylkill River course.

B. A. A. TOURNAMENT WINNERS GET SPECIALS

The best talent that appears in the B. A. A. amateur boxing tournament at the Boston Arena next Monday night, will be selected to represent Boston in an intercity competition with New York here next month. This added incentive means a high class field of entries in the Unicorn Club's first amateur show of the season.

With the B. A. A. and St. Joseph's T. A. A. fostering amateur boxing competition in this city, it means capable local representation in the New England and national amateur championships next month.

Entries for the tournament will close Thursday with Thomas J. Ka- [illegible] street, Boston

Why are They So Popular?

Is it price? Yes, but not entirely so.
Is it economical upkeep and maintenance? Yes, but that is not all.
Is it endurance? Yes, that has much to do with it, yet that is not all.
It is the downright dependability of the car; the fact that it is always ready and willing; the fact that it is easily handled and controlled in small spaces; the fact that it will go everywhere any car will go, and a great many places where others won't go.
It is all of these things that make it the every-duty car for business and for pleasure. Why not a Ford Touring Car—Now? Come in—let's talk it over.

THIS is the anniversary of the attempt by the British, in 1777, to go to the aid of Burgoyne. The English general, however, was forced to surrender at Saratoga to General Gates. This victory heartened the colonies in the battle for freedom.

5,000-Year-Old Seeds

A MORNING GLORY seed, reputed 5,000 years old, has been planted in the garden of Mrs. W. Champlin Robinson, in a Maryland village. The seed is one of twelve found in the hand of a mummy of a young Egyptian girl.

DRUNKENNESS, after all, was not happiness, and he'd had quite enough of it. And somewhere at the dark and central core of his dizzy being he knew that such things would have to end, and soon. He owed it to that faint and unfairly trampled spark which, if it went out, meant the obliteration not only of happiness, but of the hope of happiness.

Asked of Play

"What about your play, 'The Pilot Bird?'" Storrow inquired of Hardy a few days later as they made their way up to the Beaux Arts Studios to inspect a couple of new pictures by Henri Veneur.

"Dead but not buried," was Hardy's cryptic retort.

"What do you mean by that?"

"I mean that they've killed it for Broadway, but left it presentable for a Winter's run on the road. In the theatrical world, however, it's a case of nut Caesar aut nihil. And a production nowadays is a whale if it can't get up to Broadway to breathe it can't hope to live."

"But whose fault does it seem to be?"

"I don't suppose it's the fault of any particular person," explained the older man. "It's the fault of a condition. A production's no longer a personal matter. It's something that has become institutional. But its institutionalism is messed up with a taint of vagabondage, the same vagabondage that leaves it the most foolish and the most romantic business in America today."

"Why do you call it foolish?"

"Because that's all it is. Only it's a business complicated with woman and that's what most of the trouble arises from. The stage, you see, is still a magnet for one type, the type intent on exploiting its own beauty and charm. The mere presence of any such woman on the stage presupposes personal vanity. Vanity isn't primarily intelligence that you have to deal with, but a petted and petulant star and a supporting company whose thinking more about late suppers than the way they read their lines. And when you come down to the musical comedy type, the show girl and the chorus girl, you get something as frankly physical, of course, as the prize fighter model. Her business is strictly the parade of flesh. She hasn't the slightest need for brains. And if one ever got into that calling with brains, she'd have to blow 'em out with a revolver, or wash 'em out with a river of high-ball—which seems to be the more approved plan of the two."

But there are cases," contended Storrow, "where the atmosphere isn't bad."

"The atmosphere may not always be bad," retorted the other, "but the influences are. You can't set up a clearing house for sex—and that's the most you can say for it stripped of its mask, really is—and expect it to be the abiding-place of Puritanism."

News From Abroad

Storrow, conscious of the fact that Hardy rarely got a letter from home than he imagined, especially with the allusion to high-balls, was stung into a quick but futile spirit of opposition. The extent to which Torrie drank, for one thing, had been disturbing him of late. And he stood equally disturbed by the pace with which he seemed to be following in her steps

He had never, it was true, seen her entirely under the influence of liquor. She seemed able to always "trim the boat," as Pannie Atwill had once expressed it. But a few nights before, he remembered, a dreamy intonation had crept into her voice and she had merely laughed when the heaped-up tray of their dishes had crashed to the floor.

These disquisting memories were ended by his entrance to The Beaux Arts, where the telephone and the elevator interposed between the artist and his callers. And in the artist's studio, with its altar-cloths from Florence and its marbles from Rome and its wall-tapestries from the palace of a mediaeval prince, Storrow found a carefully fabricated luxuriousness strangely in contrast with the achieved purity of line. Macdougal Alley studios which he had visited but a week before—its little paved court flanked by converted coach-houses, as clean-swept as the street of a peasant village, where children played quietly and quaintly, untermfied by the thought of tram or motor car. Yet these impressions were swept aside by a still stronger one, born of a chance-heard remark that passed between Veneur and Hardy as the former for the second time passed about the heavily perfumed Egyptian cigarettes.

"I see that Vibbard is sailing for home this week."

Hardy accepted the piece of news without comment, beyond a scarcely perceptible shrug of one diffident shoulder. Storrow, on his part, was equally willing to let pass unobserved. Intelligence which could prove so foolishly and so indeterminately disturbing. Yet it filled and shadowed a wide area of his consciousness, touching his spirit with a vague and teasing sense of unrest.

The Reason Why

"Why?" he asked, startled by that initial expression of restlessness from her

Her moment of hesitation did not escape him.

"Oh, I don't know," she said with a show of listlessness. "It's only that I've been thinking how you've dragged on that old book of yours and how a little holiday would do us both good—a little holiday somewhere where we could be by ourselves and just hear the sound of water or wind in the treetops."

"Has something happened [illegible] week to make you feel that way?" he asked.

"Of course not," replied, looking up quickly

"Then it's something you've heard?" he persisted.

"Something I've heard?" she repeated. "What could I have heard—"

He had decided earlier in the day to say nothing about it. But now he merely knew the necessity of unburdening his soul of the truth.

Vibbard Coming Back

"Vibbard is coming back here to this studio of his," said Storrow, as he faced Torrie.

"Who told you that?" she finally asked.

"Veneur," was his reply. He watched her as she stooped and picked up a fallen hair-pin from the floor.

And what has Vibbard's coming back to his studio got to do with us?" she demanded.

"That's what I wanted to find out," was his retort.

She leaned back in her chair, apparently deep in thought.

"Then," she finally said with an achieved quietness which did not altogether take the vibrant tones from her voice, "I have given myself to you. I'm giving my life up to you. I feel, in a way, that I've put myself in your hands, and that you can mould me and shape me about the same as you used to shape a lump of moist clay into what you most want it to be. I fell in love with you, and let you do what you wanted with me. I love you now. I know that as well as I know I'm sitting in this chair—and I think you know it too

"You mean more to me than anything in my old life ever meant, ever could mean. But I can't help feeling that the power this gives you over me, the power to [illegible] me happy or miserable, carries with it an obligation to be fair to what I'm trying to be and do.

"I hate to think you are questioning me, and being suspicious of me, and prying about in the past for things that aren't worth digging up and that have nothing to do with our lives now when they are so full

"I once said that we could be as happy as two children. If we only had the common sense to keep the trick of happiness within reach. You remember that, don't you?"

"I remember it," he acknowledged, both relieved and depressed by these words which she was uttering with a new and unheeded gift of articulation. He was, too, acutely conscious of her beauty, touched now with a new overtone of wistfulness that struck him as almost autumnal in its tenderness.

"Life, after all," she went on almost wearily, "is a race between happiness and the undertaker—and the undertaker is always apt to win. And"—

"What sounds like Modrynski," cut in her husband, sharply

"I guess that was thought of long before Modrynski was born," replied Torrie, forlornly tranquilized by her fleeting little contemplation of times infinities. Her face relaxing into pensiveness, disturbed Storrow by its remoteness. It made him think of Roddin's Le Penseur. Yet he stood shadowed by the same cloud that darkened, however momentarily, her own soul, a cloud born of the consciousness that life was short, and death came to everything and love after all seemed only a passionate embrace on the brink of the grave, and the foolish cry of his darkened heart for something permanent in the midst of the things that must surely pass

In Great Perplexity

He stared at the shadowy-eyed woman in the faded green arm-chair, seeming to find her made suddenly precious through very impermanence. She reappeared more than ever remote from him, and yet very near. She seemed finished and free, courageous, capable, always choosing her own parts and her own ends. Yet the next moment she carried to him the impression of a harried and beaten ship being driven before the wind, buffeted by currents over which she had no control, the toy of tides, infinitely older and stronger than her own body

An indefinable pity for her crept up into his heart, a wide pity in which his temporal perplexities betrayed a tendency to become attenuated, as thin and futile as a row of gas-lamps found burning after daybreak

They talked no more of the matter in hand, that night, though he was not without an occasional suspicion that it was still occupying much of Torrie's thought

Nor did he find his own soul swept clean of its problems by the tenuous broom of emotionalism. Toward the end of the week, when he knew that Torrie was away for the afternoon, he expended three dollars for the purchase and delivery of an empty piano-case

Then, with saw and hammer, he deliberately and cool-headedly set about nailing up the communicating door between the two studios. He removed the desk, impressed with a sense of finality, replacing the imitation Gobelin tapestry with the preoccupied gravity that attaches to a ceremony fittingly executed.

It was several days before Torrie herself discovered that unexpected and significant bit of carpentry. Storrow, bent over his work table, caught the sound of her sudden gasp and looked up in time to see the sharp recoil of her body as she let the tapestry fall back in place.

"Did it surprise you?" he quietly demanded.

"No," she said, after a moment's silence, without turning about. "But it makes me think of a coffin. It looks exactly—exactly like a casket box and—"

"That the mortals nil nisi bonum," remarked the man at the table, remembering the ancient phrase from one of his earliest school boy orations. "And of that dead past, indeed, nothing good or bad was said, though Torrie rose into his heart, a wide pity in which his temporal perplexities betrayed a tendency to become attenuated, as thin and futile as a row of gas-lamps found burning after daybreak

The Action So Far in This Stirring Romance

OWEN STORROW, a young sculptor, coming to New York to perfect himself in his art, meets Torrie Throssel, a strikingly lovely girl, studying for the stage under the direction of Herman Krassler, a producer. Storrow saves his cousin, Charlotte Kirkner, from drowning, and she confesses her love for him. Later he marries Torrie, and on the advice of Chester Hardy gives up sculpture and starts to write a novel of the North Country. Torrie, very angry when Storrow divulges their marriage, quarrels with her husband, then repents and contritely tells him she has given up her stage work and that he is the only thing that counts. Storrow has a talk with Krassler about his story.

How Do You Make Tea?

Heated Controversy Over the Best Way to Prepare the Cup That Cheers

DO you drink tea?

If so you'll be interested in the argument that is going forward in inner tea drinking circles of Boston over the proper manner of preparing the cup that cheers and all that baby sort of thing as our English friends would say.

And really when you come down to investigate the subject, it's amazing how many different ways there are of getting the aforesaid cup ready for cheering.

For instance there is one cult, headed by an editor of the Boston American, who, by the way, prides himself on factors himself, that he is an expert tea maker, which prepares the tea as follows

Measure off number of cups he wishes to fill, brings the water to a boil and the moment the water bubbles adds two teaspoonfuls to each cup. This he lets hang for fifteen seconds, allows to steep for two or three minutes and pours off into a separate pot which has been kept hot with boiling water. He serves the immediately.

This recipe is intended for use with green, orange pekoe and other like teas. A smaller amount of tea is used for the so-called English breakfast teas.

Such an arrangement would not suit an old Irish woman, who puts her tea in generous handfuls in the pot early in the morning and allows it to simmer gently on the hob all day long, the longer and stronger it becomes the better is she satisfied.

Nor would it suit the Tibetan lama or his more humble follower. In Tibet tea drinking is not the act it is in some other countries. Like Japan and Burma, but tea comes near to being the great staple food of the land.

The Tibetan makes a sort of soup with his tea, using the so-called Russian brick tea. First he boils the brick until it has dissolved. The resultant mixture he pours into a churn which has been left unrinsed after the last butter making.

The tea and the remaining curds of milk are churned together until almost like a syrup. This is poured out and re-heated, when it is put into bowls into which are large lumps of rancid butter. As the Tibetan peasant drinks his tea soup he blows back the butter scum that forms on the surface.

By the time he has had three or four bowls there is a thick layer of butter and tea on the rim of the bowl, and this is worked with the fingers into balls which are eaten.

Which of these methods do you prefer?

Finger-Prints for All

The fact that Nature supplies every baby at birth with its own identity disc, which cannot be lost save by mutilation, and never wears out has prompted the organization of the New York police department that the finger-prints should be taken from the birth certificate of every child. An English authority on the subject states that finger-prints are the most certain means of identification we have. They are, he says, unchangeable throughout life. Sir William Herschel, one of the earliest students of finger-prints, took the impressions of all his fingers in 1859. He took them again fifty years later, and there was no alteration in the slightest detail. No two persons, it is said, have the same finger-prints. Thus if the finger-prints of a person are sent to New Scotland Yard, and duplicates of those prints are found to be filed, both are the are of the same person, no matter how many years earlier the first set was taken. There are about 340 different sets of finger-prints at Scotland Yard

An Invitation

"I trust, Mr. Brown," said Miss Cutting, as the young man was about to leave, "that you will spend one more evening with us before we move into our new house."

"Delighted, I assure you, Miss Cutting," replied Brown. "By the way, you might tell me when you expect to move?" I'm not positive as to the exact date," she answered, "but the workmen began painting for the cellar yesterday, and page expects the house to be finished in about eighteen months"

SALTS FINE FOR ACHING KIDNEYS

We eat too much meat which clogs Kidneys, then the Back hurts

Most folks forget that the kidneys, like the bowels, get sluggish and clogged and need a flushing occasionally, else we have backache and dull misery in the kidney region, severe headaches, rheumatic twinges, torpid liver, acid stomach, sleeplessness and all sorts of bladder disorders.

You simply must keep your kidneys active and clean, and the moment you feel an ache or pain in the kidney region, get about four ounces of Jad Salts from any good drug store here, take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then be fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and is harmless to flush clogged kidneys and stimulate them to normal activity. It also neutralizes the acids in the urine so it no longer irritates, thus ending bladder disorders.

Jad Salts is harmless; inexpensive; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which everybody should take now and then to keep their kidneys clean, thus avoiding serious complications.

A well-known local druggist says he sells lots of Jad Salts to folks who believe in overcoming kidney trouble while it is only trouble—Advertisement.

THE RHYMING OPTIMIST

By Aline Michaelis

OIf, it might be weary going down the long uncertain road when you have no way of knowing if you've strength to bear the load, you might really think it straying to one side and playing and were it not that Hope keeps saying, "Something better's just ahead!" That's the light that ever leads you through the darkest of the way, that's the thought that bravely speeds you through the dismest, grimmest day. That's the voice that cheers the lonely in their hours of utmost gloom. as it whispers: "Patience only, and you'll see the desert bloom. You will sow your seeds of love and your dearest wish come true, you will gain your meed of power, make the rooms with the true. Let your heart go ever singing, keep your faith and spirits high, and you'll find the future brings something better by and bye." So the murmur comes to cheer us and though other joys be fled, still we have this comfort near us. "Something better just ahea!!"

A Curious Glowworm

In New Zealand there is a very curious glowworm. The first idea about this insect was that it turned to a kind of beetle. Afterwards it proved to be a larva, or grub, of a fly. Its flesh is seemingly given it to attract small insects, which are its food, and these are secured by means of a web. This web is placed in a niche among rocks or trees, and has a central thread, from which run smaller threads to the sides of the opening. Upon several of the lower threads there are usually a number of globules that resemble tiny silver beads, but what is the use of these is uncertain. Upon the web, while the grub sits. If started, it glides away into a hole it has for a hiding place, and the web, hanging in the hinder part of the body, and the grub can display or darken this as it chooses. On cloudy days or nights it is the brightest, and it is not visible when the weather is cold, nor, of course, during the day. Having reached its full size, the grub becomes a chrysalis, being fastened firmly to its web. A faint light comes from the chrysalis now and then. When the fly comes out, that also has a faint light, only half as bright as that of the grub. What it feeds upon is unknown.

When a Girl Marries

By Ann Lisle

Copyright, 1921, by King Features Syndicate, Inc.

"IN the nature of things, I might be expected to come back to work, some day Most women who've liked their jobs do."

Carl puffed away luxuriously at his pipe and made no reply, so I went on still on the defensive, still armed against any implication that my being here reflected on Jim. I couldn't bear Carl to have even the faintest suspicion that Jim had failed me either financially or emotionally and that I was coming back to work to make up for such lack.

"From the beginning Mr Haldane and I tacitly understood that I might be [illegible] girls who've [illegible] more to occupy their lives than dressmakers' appointments and bridge, and discover that those things don't fill a day very happily. And now I find that during my husband's absence on a business trip of somewhat trying duration—

"Don't talk like the precepts in the copy-book," broke in Carl dryly. "Your husband's away. You've a marvellous [illegible] body to bring it to the market place. I'm not here to pass on the wisdom of your plan If you intended advice you'd have said so when you came in What you came here for is a business opportunity. That's perfectly clear. Now, lady, tell me what it is."

A Counter Proposition

"At first I hadn't an ambition beyond my old secretarial job," I said. "Then I began to look about and study the women magazines. And I thought there might well be a new department here A sort of feminine rocking chair editorial column."

"With you in charge," said Carl tersely in the crisp and quick way I was beginning to recognize as his business manner. "I like it fine, but I don't think I've a right to introduce innovations in a conservative old monthly like Haldane's. If the old gentleman were here I think he would jump at it.

"If I telegraphed or wrote him about it I'm darn near sure he'd say that I was free to go ahead. But this is his vacation. Haldane's is pulling down a big circulation as is. The magazine is steeped in Loren Haldane's personality—based on his ideas. I don't see my way clear to taking a step toward changing it."

"All right" I replied, getting to my feet and holding out my hand with my best sporting effort to cover my keen disappointment "I see your viewpoint, and I won't make any effort to change it. Thanks for the time you've taken a lot of your time, but I'm sure you don't begrudge it."

"Where are you going?" all this rush?" asked Carl, smiling equably "I've said I didn't see my way clear to making any innovation, and I don't. But I've a counter proposition to make if you care to listen."

The tonic that Carl Hardy relating my plan for a new department in Haldaner with Anne Harrison in charge. I began to realize how much I'd counted on it. I replied without enthusiasm: "All right, Carl, go ahead. Let's hear what you have to say."

"You sound as thrilled as a fish on being invited into a nice new net," chuckled Carl

As he spoke he leaned forward and tapped out his pipe, emptying the ashes with a certain purposefulness he's always had a way of infusing into trivial gestures. I know perfectly well that while he was apparently absorbed in getting his pipe an clean he was a modern, white-tiled kitchen, he was marshalling his facts in order and preparing to railroad his ideas through in a way which has made him such a success in the advertising and publishing game.

"Yes, Your Honor!" I invited.

A New Vision

"It's like this," said Carl "This job is several sizes too big for me. I'm an advertising man—not an editor, but here I have to sit looking as serene as Buddha until Loren Haldane, Esq., comes back to his own And I haven't even an efficient secretary—just part of the time a nice girl recruited from the Art Department's busy ranks Can't you see the lay of the land yourself, Barbara Anne? The blueprint's right in front of you. Can you read the specifications and measurements?"

"I can, but they don't fit." I answered coolly, rising and starting to fasten the buttons of the coat I'd loosened at my throat

Carl's vice was almost arousing as he rose, too, and faced me severely

"Are you trying to make me feel that I'm a snob now in business matters?" I asked hastily, half wondering if this were indeed so, even while I was on the verge of emphatic denial.

"Precisely!" interrupted Carl gravely. "Barbara Anne Lee was one of the finest girls I've ever known. She found inspiration and a chance to do good work as the secretary to Mr. Haldane. But when Mrs. James Hunter Harrison makes a try at the world of business, she must have an editorial position and a department of her own at the least. The idea of doing her work under the direction of some one else is too much for that important social personage."

ADVICE TO THE LOVELORN

By Beatrice Fairfax

Rewinning a Sweetheart

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX

Winter, I dropped my friendship with a young man whose acquaintance I had been from childhood. I acted under the influence of friends, who disliked he being intimate with me; in short, he wasn't a sport and was too quiet.

I know that were I to write him and tell him that I still care he might come back, but I feel that I may be humiliating myself by taking that action.

What would you advise?

GENEVIEVE M

OF course you must realize that the very charges your friends brought against your sweetheart demonstrated his caliber. To drop a man because he isn't a "sport" is typical of today's weakness Now, if you realize what you have lost through your own weakness and lack of high standards, how can you quibble about whether you would be humiliating yourself were you to write and say you realize how you blundered in undervaluing his friendship?

Do You Know That—

ITCHING ECZEMA DRIED RIGHT UP WITH SULPHUR

Any breaking out of the skin even fiery, itching eczema, can be quickly overcome by applying a little Mentho-Sulphur—a pure, clear skin specialist. Because of its germ-destroying properties, this sulphur preparation instantly brings ease from skin irritation, soothes and heals the eczema right up and leaves the skin clear and smooth

It seldom fails to relieve the torment and disfigurement. Sufferers from skin trouble should get a little jar of Mentho-Sulphur from any good druggist and use it like a cold cream.—Advertisement.

Best Recipe Contest

All New England Housewives Are Asked to Compete—For Rules See Advertising Pages

THE first best recipe prize goes this week to a Hingham housewife. Her way of making spice tarts was considered by the Boston American's judge, Miss Alice Bradley, principal of Miss Farmer's School of Cookery, the best of many.

THE WINNER

MRS. FRED J. KARRER,

Spice Tart

One cup butter, 2 cups sugar, 4 large eggs, 4 cups flour, 2 level teaspoons baking powder, 2 tablespoons cinnamon, 3 ounces shelled almonds (if desired), jelly.

Cream butter; stir in sugar; beat eggs well and add. Sift baking powder and cinnamon with flour. Work into first mixture. (Dough should be just soft enough to handle.) If nuts are used, add them last, finely chopped

Roll out dough on floured board to quarter-inch thickness. Line layer cake tins, letting dough come about half way up sides of tins. Spread thinly with jelly. (Quince is especially good.) Cut strips of dough not over one-half inch wide, and arrange criss-cross about one and one-half inches apart. Lay stripe around edge. Bake in medium oven until nicely browned

Amount makes three or four dozen, according to size of tins. Improve with age.

An order for $25 in groceries and provisions has been forwarded to Mrs. Karrer, drawn on the Ginter Company.

He Understood

"Yes, I need an office boy. Are you truthful?"

"Oh, yes sir! But, of course, I understand business is business."

No Return Ticket.

"I'd go to the end of the world for you, girlie." "Go as far as you like, but don't bother to buy a return ticket."

The Wrong Color

Mrs. Newed: "I want to find three of these eggs back to change them."

Grocer: "They are quite fresh, ma'am."

HAVE DARK HAIR AND LOOK YOUNG

Nobody can Tell when you Darken Gray, Faded Hair with Sage Tea

Grandmother kept her hair beautifully darkened, glossy and attractive with a brew of Sage Tea and Sulphur. Whenever her hair took on that dull faded or streaked appearance, this simple mixture was applied with wonderful effect. By asking at any drug store for "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound," you will get a large bottle of this old-time recipe, improved by the addition of other ingredients, all ready to use, at very little cost. This simple mixture can be depended upon to restore natural color and beauty to the hair.

A well known downtown druggist says everybody uses Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound now because it darkens so naturally and evenly that nobody can tell it has been applied—it's so easy to use, too. You simply dampen a comb or soft brush and draw it through your hair, taking one strand at a time. By morning the gray hair disappears, after another application or two, it is restored to its natural color and looks glossy, soft and beautiful.—Advertisement.

"CONSTIPATED AND MISERABLE"—INTERNAL BATHS STOPPED IT

Mr. L. C. Garvin of 435 E. 9th St., Chester, Pa., writes to the Tyrrell Hygienic Co.:

"While I have been comparatively healthy all my life, yet I was always troubled with Constipation and you know without my telling you, what it means.

"Since using the 'J. B. L. Cascade,' I hardly know what it means to feel badly for even an hour. I am a firm believer in your treatment."

Thousands testify that Constipation, Indigestion, Stomach Troubles, Biliousness, Headaches and all the many serious ailments caused by self-poisoning are absolutely relieved and prevented by this Nature Treatment.

Any Liggett's Store.

will gladly explain to you the simple operation of the "J. B. L. Cascade," why it is so certain in its results, and will give you free of cost, an interesting little book containing the results of the experiences of Dr. Chas. A. Tyrrell of New York, who was a specialist on Intestinal Complaints for 25 years in that city. Why not call this out as a reminder to get this book as soon as possible. Remember, please, it is free.—Advertisement.

FINANCE AND BUSINESS

By B. C. FORBES.

Is this typical of what is liable to happen in other lines of business?

The revival in building brought a demand for lath. It was quickly discovered that supplies were abnormally low, and, in short order, quotations for lath jumped up and up until the total value advance exceeded 25 per cent.

* * *

That is not very important in itself. But, combined with recent advances in cotton goods, in certain woolen goods, in steel products, in lumber, in furs, etc., it suggests that once bottom clearly has been touched, recovery here and there can rapidly become quite pronounced.

We have seen the same thing happen in gilt-edged investment bonds and in attractive railroad and industrial shares.

* * *

Here are a number of directions in which there have been distinctly encouraging developments:

Steel	Railroad Earnings
Copper	Shoes
Tin	Woolen Goods
Lead	Cotton Goods
Zinc	Silks
Building	Furs
Lumber	Leather
Rubber	Security Receipts
Coal	Retail Prices
Canned Goods	Price Averages
Coffee	Public Utilities
Railroad Car Loadings	Bank Reserves
	Security Offerings
	Security Prices
	Enthusiasm

* * *

The investigations conducted by the committee on unemployment and its experts reveal that the employment picture has been overdrawn.

The committee is acting in a businesslike way, and there is every reason for confidence that unemployment problems will be sensibly handled this Winter, more satisfactorily indeed, than during any previous period of depression.

This is infinitely better than allowing matters to drift, as some capitalists are understood to have advocated, in order that wages might be pulled down and labor unions knocked on the head. That wages in various industries will be lowered is certain, but it is better for all that necessary readjustments be conducted in orderly fashion and not ruthlessly forced upon workers by employers simply because they had the power temporarily.

* * *

One very encouraging feature of the business situation is this: Idle money is piling up so steadily that bankers will find themselves compelled to change their tactics in order to find work for it. Borrowers will be sought out.

There is gratifying significance in the rapidity with which new issues of securities have lately been offered and absorbed at lower interest rates than formerly in vogue. The day of the 8 per cent. bond has already passed. Something like $100,000,000 railway equipment obligations have been bought by investment bankers at 6 per cent, and are being marketed to yield somewhat less.

Instead of crop moving demands having lowered money rates and thus raised rates, bank reserves today are at the highest point touched since 1917, and interest rates are distinctly trading downwards.

The finding of employment for idle funds will stimulate the employment of labor, broaden business, and act as a tonic upon the whole situation, especially as pessimism is melting away and optimism reasserting itself.

* * *

But aren't there clouds? Of course there are. If there were no clouds you couldn't find such investment bargains as are now available, prices of raw materials and finished products would not be at their present levels, labor would not be in overplentiful supply at declining wages.

* * *

To my mind, Germany is the darkest cloud now overhanging. But statesmanship ought to prove able to avert a crisis. The condition of most foreign exchanges is another serious handicap. The actions of railway labor leaders are not inspiring some concern, particularly among those who would rather avoid than invite a fight-to-the-finish battle with railway labor at this time.

* * *

Even the international situation, however, holds a preponderance of hopeful features. Russia is tardily but surely coming to her economic senses. The Irish issue bids fair to be settled, just as the best informed have unwaveringly predicted all along. Official reports received at Washington from South America record distinct improvement in conditions there. Impending Mexican developments are rich in promise. The 40 per cent. rise in silver since March, and India's purchase of gold, reflect very important betterment throughout the Orient. And, looking farther afield, next month's conference on the limitation of armaments contains momentous possibilities for lightening the world's load.

* * *

In short, we are emerging from our Winter of discontent and depression, and if wisdom, courage and moderation govern the activities alike of those in high places and in humble station, there is no reason why reasonably prosperous times should not be brought about from now on.

September Stock Sales

Sales of stocks on the New York Stock Exchange in September this year totalled 12,219,100 shares, the largest aggregate since June. Bond sales for the month amounted to $297,521,000, or $65,267,000 more than in August.

Boston Financial Notes

September shipments by the Island Oil & Transport Co. amounted to 1,350,000 barrels, the largest total for any month in the company's history.

The Curtis Mills in Millbury, Mass, resume full-time operations today after being on a five-day-a-week schedule for more than a year.

Stocks Irregular at the Close; Trading Active; Call Rate Drops to 5 Per Cent.

AM. SUGAR AT A NEW RECORD LOWEST

Most Issues Show Losses When Market Ends; Oils Led in Strength

By W. B. ROSS.
Financial Editor.

While the list was irregular at the close of the New York market, most issues were down from one to five points, and the tone was heavy. But for oils and a few other issues the market would have been decidedly weak. There was a last hour reaction which took many losses to their lowest level of the session. Others then sold at their highest. Trading was active most of the time, transactions exceeding half a million shares.

Among weakest issues were American Sugar, Cuba Cane and Pierce-Arrow preferred. At their lowest they were down from one to about two points. Strong stocks included American Petroleum, International Harvester, Mexican Petroleum, Invincible, Caddo Oil, Pure Oil, Pullman and United States Rubber, which they showed from one to more than two points gain.

Heaviness prevailed during the second hour, but during the noonday period there was a slow recovery upward. Call loans renewed at 5½ per cent., but the rate afterwards dropped to 5 per cent. American Sugar established a new low record price in the forenoon dealings. Interborough issues were at their highest and sales and sugars at their lowest. Foreign exchange rates were off a fifth at the outset.

BEGAN WITH GAINS.

Most of the orders which accumulated over Sunday were to buy and stocks were bought at the opening, gains ranging in a two to one majority on initial transactions. But the advance invited profit-taking and offerings were of such volume that they could not be easily absorbed. The trend shifted at once and there was an easing off movement which caused a complete reversal within an hour. The selling movement as most weakness as it had strength. There was a relaxation of selling pressure and trading was dull during the hour. Oils had the most and sugars the least support. Cuba Cane common and preferred sold at new record lows and American Sugar duplicated its lowest figure in the forenoon. Low-priced oils contributed most of the strength to the petroleum group. Rails were irregular and showed small changes on the day. Coppers were heavy on a few transactions, motors were irregular, rubber a shade lower and coppers reflected the general tendency after making a good start.

STILL IN A RUT.

The market remained during the morning in the rut in which it moved last week and seemed to be waiting for greater impetus than has been provided by recent reports whether from Europe, Washington or industrial centers. It is said to be in an oversold condition and short selling is less aggressive. A good borrowing demand for stocks in the loan market was reported after trading ended last week. Interborough Sugar and Sears-Roebuck loaned flat. General rates were 6% for industrials and 6% for railroads. The recent advance of the money rate is attributed to the large amounts required for October 1 disbursements. The clearing house statement showed a deficit of nearly $11,000,000 and a decrease of more than $43,000,000 in surplus reserve.

Corporation Reports

For the June fiscal year the International Agricultural Corporation reports a deficit after charges and taxes of $8,031,062 in the previous year, compared with a profit of $8,031,062 in the previous year. Net sales for the year amounted to $14,809,947, compared with $18,-275,324 for the preceding month of year. A decrease of $1,475,377 or 9.06 per cent.; for ten months, $27,784,501 against $34,720,000, a decrease of $10,360,315 or 32.98 per cent.

The Chile Copper Co. reports for the June quarter a deficit after charges including depreciation of $1,197,000, compared with a deficit of $1,497,000 in the March quarter, and surplus of $424,774 or 51 cents a share in the corresponding quarter of 1920.

The North American Co. reports for the twelve months ended August 31 net earnings before depreciation and dividends of $8,031,108, as compared with $8,529,446 in the previous year.

The Texas Co. of about $8,940,000 reported by the Texas Co. for the first half of 1921 compared with net income of more than $50,000,000 in the first half of 1920.

Net profits of about $8,940,000 reported by the Texas Co. for the first half of 1921 compared with net income of more than $50,000,000 in the first half of 1920.

The Republic Railway & Light Co. reports for August net earnings after taxes of $132,288 in August of last year and $121,149 in July of this year, sufficient to cover bond interest charges, dividends on bonds and subsidiary preferred stocks and leave a surplus of $15,139 for the company, which is double of $7,548,000 for the previous month and a deficit of $47,000 for August, 1920.

Dividend Declarations

RISE IN STOCKS SHOWS BETTER BUSINESS

Evans Declares Genuine Change for Good Evidenced in Security Market

By C. B. EVANS

Chicago, Oct. 3.—Reports from various parts of the country and this city recently said to have shown some improvement are confirmed by further advices, and some items are added to the list.

The feeling is more confident in spite of recent declines in agricultural products which are a disappointment to a large number of people. Some local upturns have been exaggerated in the imaginations of observers, and it will take a great many changes to constitute a complete case for revival. The fact that a large corporation here recently sold 200,000 pounds of pop corn in one day does not indicate that everybody on earth is popping corn.

EVIDENCE OF STOCKS.

The best evidence of the breadth and genuineness of the change is found in the security market, for securities are based on property, manufacture and merchandising, and the new prices of securities are a result of reports from those interests which in the main show evidence of decline or actual advance. The same process is now going on as for three months past, or even as many months. The buyers are picking up stocks little by little on the thread of such ideas that they must rise sometime. And there is no basis so good for strength in securities as strength in merchandise. The moderate decline in money rates has helped.

Chief among the commodities forming such a basis is petroleum. The feeling is that, if anything lurking to be a success in the future, that commodity will be, for it is coming into more and more general use in all sorts of connections and the experts tell us the supply is limited, though so far as appears no one of them has been all over the world and put the matter to a test. As I have said before, fat is one of the essentials and that mineral fat is the best of all for some purposes. Here are the reasons why that Chicago has derived from the fat of pigs has predisposed our people to the use of the grease that spouts itself out of the earth.

LIBERAL OIL BUYING.

Probably it cannot be said definitely that the lift in oil stocks was facilitated by purchases in this city, but certain it is that our investors and traders have given liberally to them. The interest in Texas Company here was a big one and the same in Mexican buyers have gone into the phenomenal performer, Texas & Pacific Coal & Oil, while Salt Creek and other Wyoming issues are favorites. Prairie Oil & Gas has recently gained a movement on itself but it smells rather strong of money for the ordinary trader. As the theory is that those in it an officer of the company may be quoted as saying when the time is ripe and the company could abandon all work and liquidate at $800 per share.

The movement in the copper stocks also is based on an estimate of the condition of the trade in that metal, which, heretofore concealed and always the subject of secretion is beginning to demonstrate a little in the open. The amount of this metal above ground appears to be very small, the operation of the mines is at a low ebb and the demand is small, consequently the advanced prices for U. S. stocks must be considered a prophecy and sometimes prophecies go wrong, but confidence in this city is great.

DON'T OVERLOOK STEEL.

It is illogical to buy these stocks at the advance in prices and have poor little United States Steel alone in its corner at 83 or thereabouts, for the sales of copper and iron have been large before the sales of steel are large, but the thought is that when copper starts going it will go more rapidly than most other stocks. Moreover the amount of money involved in hundred shares of this stock is much smaller than in the case of the large steel companies.

Speculators here are practically counting Europe out of the game, This ordinarily is a fatuous thing to do, but it is felt that the worst has been known and that even if Germany becomes admittedly bankrupt the event will not throw the earth out of its orbit.

More Demand for Leather

More demand for leather is reported and while prices in general have held firm there is an upward tendency for finer grade material. Better buying of black calfskins is reported and heavier grades of sole leather have gone up 2 to 3 cents a pound. Packer backs, standard quality, are being firmly held at 45 cents for light, 47 to 48 cents for medium and 50 cents for the heavy steers, tannery run.

Higher Price for Copper

At the end of last week sales of 15,000,000 pounds of copper were reported. November delivery had brought 12 6-8 cents a pound, while October business, at 12 1-2 cents, had been booked. Germany, Japan and France have been buying in this country, while American consumers have begun to replenish stocks of red metal. It is reported that most of the 1,000 ported scrap brass and second hand copper has been absorbed.

GALLI CURCI AT SYMPHONY HALL GIVES DELIGHT

Beauty and Clarity of Tones Show Summer's Rest Has Been Beneficial

Boston's musical season opened auspiciously yesterday afternoon at Symphony Hall, when Galli Curci, undoubtedly the most popular woman singer in the world today, gave the first recital in the long series of Mudgett concerts, which include all the world's greatest artists.

Galli Curci was fresh from a Summer of rest and quiet, and it was evident from the beauty and clarity of her tones that it had been very beneficial to her. The program she offered contained two standard coloratura arias, the mad scene from "Lucia" and the mad scene from "Hamlet." Galli Curci was equally perfect in each.

But these "crazy" ladies' arias are sweet and thrilling melodies; there is no particular amount of violence or emotion in either of them. They might be called more antly the "silly scene," from Hamlet and Lucia.

They do offer a singer with fireworks in her lofty stories a wonderful opportunity to shoot them off. Galli was exceedingly liberal with coloratura, for she also sang some the fora a lul from "Traviata" with brilliant effect. The remainder of her program consisted of French, Italian and English songs.

She also sang a coon song, entitled "Mah Lady Lou," by Carl Sandburg, a fetching little thing. And to please the sentimental she sang "Home, Sweet Home" and "Long, Long ago."

REV. DR. VAN ALLEN BACK FROM 10,000-MILE TRIP

Rev. William Harman Van Allen rector of the Church of the Ascension, returned to his duties after a 10,000-mile trip, and was given a warm welcome, not only by his own people but also by a delegation from the Episcopal Church at Mayport, Fla. He said he was glad to be back "in the best city in the world in which to live."

TECH DOORS OPENED FOR ITS 57TH YEAR

Massachusetts Institute of Technology opened its doors for the 57th year today. The school year opening today featured a return to the practice of admitting all other freshman class in January. This class can, by some super study, catch up with the first class by the beginning of the sophomore year in 1922.

RUMANIA DENIES SHE PLOTS WAR UPON RUSSIA

By NORMAN HAPGOOD,
Staff Correspondent of the Boston American.

Washington, Oct. 3.—The news that has been sent across from time to time about the relations between Rumania and Soviet Russia has been disquieting. Recently the conventional cables have taken the form that Russia was mobilising against Rumania.

People who have tried to be intellectual about their Soviet scares have pointed out that the conveniences for mobilization against Rumania were unusual, on account of railroads and geography, and that the temptation was great, on account of grain.

It is, therefore, with much satisfaction that I receive from the Rumanian Minister a statement that is reassuringly definite. I know Prince Bibesco and have always found him accurate. He writes:

"I have received a dispatch from the Rumanian Prime Minister, General Avarescu, telling me that all the rumors regarding an eventual war between Russia and Rumania are devoid of any foundation whatever.

"General Avarescu, who is a man inclined toward peace, realizes the problems which are most important at home for every government are those of reconstruction. Far from fighting, Rumania has recently appointed delegates who are going to treat with a mission of four Russian Soviet delegates who are coming to Rumania to buy grain."

NO SIGN OF SANITY

Another symptom of sanity lately was Mr. Hoover's cablegram to his office in London telling any of the American staff who took any part whatever in politics was to be sent home. It may be that we have turned the corner and are going to look at the tragic Russian situation hereafter without political passion.

In a recent article I spoke of the passport grafted in Chicago. All these things count. They help us from the habit of co-operating, instead of interfering, dictating and sneering with alarm.

The next step that the State Department might wisely take would be to inform the little group of Russians in particular admitting any other freshman class in January. This class can, by some super study, catch up with the first class by the beginning of the sophomore year in 1922.

DANGER IN FRENCH VIEW.

Such a step, however, would involve us in complications even more delicate than we are already in. France is going to raise what trouble between Great Britain and the United States she can, and for us to take the French view of the Russian question would give her an easy opening.

Not long ago a French paper which stands well with the French government accused the Britain and German governments of being on the brink of making elaborate treaties to be signed by Lenine in Berlin and London, by which he is to resign and turn over the government to a more moderate coalition headed by Krassin.

Exaggerated as the Matin's story is, it represents accurately French fears. The French do resent the cooperative efforts being made by the Germans and British to encourage the moderating efforts of Lenin and to increase conservatism in Russia without a counter-revolution.

FRANCE DOES NOT BELONG.

France, as a mater of fact, did not belohg in Washington at all. It is not a conference of all nations, like that one in Paris. It is not a conference on all subjects.

It is a conference on two subjects only. One is on Pacific problems. On that subject France has nothing to say if Holland has not.

The other subject, which was the original subject through which Borah forced the conference, is reduction of naval armament. France does not come into that problem. All she can do is make a solution more difficult by her warlike and scared attitude.

Before the conference begins, the recent improvements in our foreign policy ought to be carried far enough to prevent any French or Russian stirring up of the Russian situation.

NOT REAL REPRESENTATIVE.

Mr. Avarescu, who is one of the delegates from Paris, is an excellent man, who was once at the head of a constitutional government in Siberia. Avarescu government by force, and then the United States and the rest of the Entente backed Kolchak until he collapsed.

With all of Mr. Avarescu's merits, therefore, it is obvious that he represents Russia today, just as little as does Kolchak's ambassador, Mr. Bakhmeteff.

There are, in other words, both good and bad signs on the horizon, about the attitude of the West toward Russia, but it is a step ahead to have at least a part of the steps indicate sanity.

NOTED SPEAKERS FOR CHAMBER LUNCHEONS

A galaxy of speakers, including Secretary of Agriculture Henry C. Wallace; A. D. Lasker, chairman of the United States Shipping Board; Frederick Roy Martin, head of the Associated Press; Charles S. Mitchell, president of the National City Bank of New York; Colonel Leonard P. Ayres, vice-president of the Cleveland Trust Company; and George E. Meyercord, president of the Illinois Manufacturers' Association, will feature the Fall series of Assembly Luncheons held under the auspices of the Boston Chamber of Commerce.

The first luncheon, with Colonel Leonard P. Ayres of Cleveland as the speaker, will be held on Thursday, October 13, at the Copley-Plaza Hotel. Under the title "Where Do We Go From Here," Colonel Ayres will discuss the general business situation confronting the United States today.

OFFERS TO GIVE JEWISH FUND $100,000

Like Sum Must First Be Raised in Boston Before Donor Reveals Name

A Boston philanthropist will contribute $100,000 to the $1,000,000 emergency fund of the Hebrew Sheltering and Immigrant Aid Society of America, if the fund drive appeals in the Boston Synagogue raises $100,000.

Abraham Alpert, editor of the Jewish Boston American, made the announcement at a conference of leading Jewish organizations under the auspices of the Boston branch of the national organization.

If the $100,000 is raised, the philanthropist's name will be announced Tuesday, Alpert said. While Boston's quota to the fund is but $50,000, the desire of the unknown donor to have this city impell the rest of the country led to his generous offer.

Services are being held in every Greater Boston synagogue today in observance of the Jewish new year.

Today marks the beginning of the Hebrew year 5682. The season is one of gladness to the people of this faith, who observe the day as a feast day.

This year the new year has a special significance. At the synagogues the worshippers will hear a message from the Holy Land, delivered by speakers representing the "Keren Hayesod."

The "Keren Heyesod" is the Palestine Foundation Fund, the object of which is to raise $100,000,000 in five years to promote the re-establishment of Palestine as the Jewish national home.

Speakers representing the fund will simultaneously speak today in synagogues in every part of the country.

SIZE OF AMERICAN FAMILIES DECREASES

Washington, Oct. 3.—The size of families in the United States is steadily decreasing, the average number of persons in a family in 1920 being 4.3, while in 1910 it was 4.5; in 1900, 4.7; in 1890, 4.9, while in 1880 five people to a family were found, the Census Bureau announced today.

The total population of the United States, June 1, 1920, was 105,710,620, and it was grouped into 24,351,676 families, residing in 20,917,904 dwellings.

The average number of persons to a dwelling was 5.1 in 1920, while in 1880 it was 5.67.

SCOUTMASTERS' CAMPAIGN IS UNDER WAY

Exhibitions by Members of Boston Troops to Mark All-Week Drive

Beginning today and continuing through Saturday night the campaign for additional scoutmasters for the Boston Council, Boy Scouts, including Boston, Brookline, Milton, Dedham and Westwood, will be in full swing. The need for more scoutmasters in this territory is apparent. Hundreds of boys are waiting to be taken into troops as the scoutmasters are forthcoming.

James J. Storrow, a member of the Boy Scout Council, urges that all men from twenty-one to sixty—or even older—who feel a call to help boys to become good citizens, should confer with Edward S. Rooke, at No. 15 Ashburton pl., Boston, the campaign headquarters.

Mr. Storrow is not inclined to set the age limit at forty-five, and it is a fact that one of the best scoutmasters, formerly in this district, was a Civil War veteran, who died at the age of seventy years, used to drive the troop every Saturday.

EXHIBITIONS PLANNED.

Every afternoon during the week from 4 o'clock several Boy Scouts will give exhibitions of bandaging, first aid, wireless and signaling in the A. Shuman & Company window at the corner of Washington and Summer streets, and at the North and South Stations and near the parade ground on Boston Common, if the weather permits. These boys will be authorized to take applications from men who are willing to become scoutmasters.

Members of the industrial committee, of which Mr. Storrow is chairman, will canvass their various lines, and each day speakers from Boy Scout headquarters will go to various manufacturing plants in the interest of the campaign. Mr. Rooke will speak on several morning during the week to male employes at the Edison Electric Company store and at R. H. White's.

PLENTY OF COMPENSATION.

John R. P. French, a former scoutmaster in Brookwood, says that when a man who likes boys becomes a scoutmaster he finds that while there is work in store for him, there is plenty of compensation. There is an interesting common ground on which scoutmasters every week, he says, and this Mr. French calls briefly, to councils:

"The boy in the man meeting the man in the boy."

Thousands Fall as Moslems Fight Soviet Forces

By International News Service.

London, Oct. 3.—Thousands of casualties are reported in a violent battle between Bolshevik troops and Moslems at Baku, on the Caspian Sea in Trans-Caucasia, according to a statement given out by the Azerbaijan information bureau today.

This report was not confirmed by any official source. The Moslems at Baku were said to have hoisted banners inscribed "Independence or Death." The Reds opened a bombardment from the Caspian Sea and part of the city was destroyed.

There are certain types of men who would be especially welcomed for scoutmaster work, for instance men who have followed the sea, men who are interested in mechanics and men who are veterans of the World War, though any man of proper age who is two-fisted and likes boys is a likely scoutmaster, Ralph B. Williams is chairman of the general committee in charge of the campaign.

MRS. BELMONT TO LEAD WOMAN'S PARTY

Washington, Oct. 3.—Mrs. O. H. P. Belmont of New York has been unanimously elected president of the National Woman's party and has made a gift to the organization of $144,000. This makes a total of $223,000 she has given the suffrage organization. With the latest gift three houses known as "the old Capitol" have been purchased. In accepting the presidency of the party Mrs. Belmont said she believed the organization would accomplish the civil equality of women.

NEW SUBWAY STATION TO BE OPEN BY XMAS

The new Arlington street subway station of the Boston Elevated will be opened in time to take care of the Christmas rush, it is announced. The original contract called for completion on December 31, 1920, and the bid was $474,600, but alterations in the plans resulted in an extension of the contract.

FIRE DESTROYS TWO AUTOS IN UXBRIDGE

Uxbridge, Oct. 3.—Police and fire authorities today were investigating a fire of mysterious origin which caused $4,000 damage to the Maynard garage.

A new touring car and a delivery truck in the basement were destroyed and the building reduced to a shell.

DAYLIGHT TIME TO BE FOUGHT IN ENGLAND

Opposition May Prevent Its Use in Future, Say London Papers

By Associated Press.

London, Oct. 3.—England was today working again under Greenwich time, Summer time having ended this morning.

It is possible that the daylight saving plan will not be resumed in future, it is declared by newspapers, as it has encountered considerable opposition in agricultural quarters, and from theatrical, educational and railway interests. These are expected to endeavor to defeat the bill for making daylight saving a permanent feature each Summer in England.

The bill was introduced in Parliament during the last session by the home secretary, and forces opposing it will be marshalled when it comes up for second reading after Parliament reassembles.

The London Times today printed a long article on the "Value of Daylight Saving in Summer is not a benefit, but an evil, especially during a season of intense sunshine and high temperatures such as was experienced in England this year. He admits, however, that during a cold, dull Summer, daylight saving time might be beneficial.

Dr. Moore contends that the plan of advancing the clocks one hour during the Summer months is particularly disadvantageous to school children, agricultural interests and some industrial workers.

3 BIG FIRMS ADOPT SIMMONS' SERVICE PLAN

Following a meeting of the Simmons College Corporation, Carl Dreyfus, of Jacob Dreyfus & Sons, announced that the Simmons College Service Plan, by which the college SHALL INTO a contract to serve business firms, has just been adopted by three important Boston concerns: Stone & Webster; Harris, Forbes & Co., Inc., and the United Drug Company. Dreyfus is chairman of the "committee on service to the community," which is working under the direction of the endowment fund committee. It seeks to raise $1,000,000 for Simmons College within the next few weeks.

British Influence in U. S. Merchant Marine

How Australia Treats Same Kind of Propaganda and Runs a Successful Freight Line

At the close of the Napoleonic War we had the carrying trade of the world. Our clipper ships spelled American romance, adventure, initiative and shrewdness in every port of the seven seas. We lost it by neglect and the development of world conditions of which we took no heed.

At the close of the last great war we were better equipped to carry the world's trade than any other nation on earth. But things began to happen even before the war, even in the midst of it. When Great Britain was fighting for her very life and was on her knees for our help, she had time enough to scheme out contracts and agreements and situations which would euchre us out of our maritime leadership.

These schemes were unearthed, these contracts were discovered and exposed and our Shipping Board tardily directed that they should be cancelled. We are not aware yet that they have been cancelled. Evidence of British influence and of British interest in our merchant shipping, supposed to be 100 per cent. American, has been revealed, and there is a great suspicion that the failure of our Shipping Board has not been without sabotage on the part of unpatriotic Americans and even of British subjects smuggled into important positions in the management of our fleet.

On the other hand, the Australian Government is running its ships with profit, and in reply to the propaganda which is being circulated in Australia, as it is circulated here, that the government opposites to sell its ships and abandon the function of carrying freight for the people of Australia, Prime Minister Hughes says:

There is absolutely no foundation for the report that negotiations are proceeding for the sale of the Commonwealth government line of steamers. Reports to this effect have been circulated repeatedly, no doubt, with the object of shaking the confidence of supporters and would-be supporters of the line, which is serving its purpose too well and making too much headway to please some of our friends. As such propaganda does meet with some degree of success, I repeat emphatically that there is no truth whatever in the statement. No proposal for its purchase has ever been put up, and even if this were not the case, the line has proved of such great value to Australia and her trade that it would be absurd to consider for a moment the idea of parting with it.

Apart altogether from the advantages accruing from its influence upon freight rates, conditions of carriage, etc., it is still operating at a substantial profit and, if I am to judge by the statements of other shipowners as to the heavy losses they are accruing, our position today in this respect is almost unique. In any case, it certainly does not bear out the oft-repeated statement that a government cannot conduct such ventures as well and economically as private enterprise.

The Commonwealth Line is not run with the object of ousting private enterprise, not attempting to create a government monopoly, but merely to foster and assist in the advancement of Australian trade, to promote trade between Great Britain and the Commonwealth, and to afford security that in all circumstances adequate means of transportation at reasonable cost and under equitable conditions will be provided for Australia's exports and imports.

The line is here to stay, will continue to be conducted on these broad lines, and will, I predict, gradually expand and force its way to the front as one of the foremost and best conducted lines trading to Australia.

We wish that some head of the American Government as powerful as Mr. Hughes in Australia could and would say about the American merchant marine as Mr. Hughes has said about the Australian merchant marine. Let nobody think that Australia has succeeded because her wages are lower than our wages and her labor costs are therefore lower. Australia pays better than we do. The Australian standard of living is higher even than the American. Australia is a great democratic government. Organized wealth has very much less control there than here.

Newberry and Old Practice

Copyright, 1921, Star Company

George Washington solemnly worked against the abuses of party spirit. He feared that if Americans united into political parties they would let party prejudice distort true vision of the public welfare.

Since the Republic's early days party lines have at no time been so lightly held as today. Yet in the Newberry case we witness the familiar spectacle of all the Republicans on the investigating committee voting for a whitewash, just as all the Democrats would so have voted had the subject of investigation been a Democratic Senator-elect.

Now the unchallengeable fact is that Newberry was elected to the Senate by a use of money so lavish as to amount to a scandal as well as a breach of the letter and spirit of the primary law.

Henry Ford could probably have beaten Newberry had Henry played the purchase game, for the Ford "bar'l" was much the larger.

These facts are not affected by the politics of the two men. If purchase of senatorships is objectionable at all, it is quite as objectionable when done in behalf of a rich Republican as when it is done in behalf of a rich Democrat, and there should be no division by party in either case.

But if Henry Ford makes good his threat to carry the facts to the people it may turn out that public opinion will not be so complaisant.

Letters to the Editor

Sixth Congressional Vote

Editor Boston American:

In the election of Congressman last week, the vote when studied does not show a great Republican victory. At the primary election the votes cast for the Republican candidate were rising more than 21,000. At the election Tuesday, 22,545 votes were cast for Colonel Andrews, showing that about 9,000 Republicans did not vote, registering a fault with the Republican Congress.

Eight thousand Democrats did not vote, evidently thinking that there was no chance to elect a Democrat. Had the dissatisfied Republicans joined with the unthinking Democratic voters, added to the Democratic votes cast, 6,793, would have made a total of 23,798, thereby giving the Democratic candidate a majority of 1,257 votes.

CLIFFORD H. PLUMMER.

Coal and Wages

Editor Boston American:

The daily papers contain articles which blame the high cost of coal to the wages received by the laborers who handle the coal. Now take my own case, for instance. my husband is a coal chauffeur earning $31 per week. We have four children, from five to ten years old. They are in fine health and every one of them can eat as hearty a meal as a grownup. With the cost of food away up, also rent, and children's shoes at $2.50 to $3 per pair, how on earth do the capitalistic papers expect the average laboring man to make both ends meet on the wages they are receiving?

LET IT GO AT THAT

Players and Lookers-On

By Winifred Black

Copyright, 1921, by Newspaper Feature Service, Inc.

How much there is in games—they show so well the engrossing thoughts of those who play and those who look on!

Looking on, it seems, is getting to be the real pleasure with many persons. The vast crowds that gather to see a few men play baseball—men who perhaps once played the game themselves, but who now sit planted in a seat watching some other fellows play. And play is work, too—this seems but a feint of recreation.

The great bowls, where fast racers on racing motors drive round and round in mad rivalry, with thousands looking on, the immense crowds at the so-called boxing matches—these afford little in the way of manly sports and exercise and generous play for the fun of it, to the great mass of men who profess to be votaries of the "American Game."

To see real enthusiasts of baseball, you must go to some vacant lot and watch the play of some schoolboys, who have called to meet them, their friends from some other school.

Men no longer walk. I wonder if, at last, we shall see the whole world going on wheels and wondering what legs and feet were made for.

Getting the Best

In music, we're going the same way. Angelina rarely sits down to the piano and plays her favorite music. The talking machine is called into requisition, and it plays so well for dancing that no one dreams of tiring herself at the piano.

We walk, we sing, we dance, by machinery. We play most of our games by proxy. Only a few are left in which grit and individuality and the love of outdoor sports gives play to the survivors of active life.

Where are we going with our amusements by proxy? We are certainly going somewhere, and at a great, great rate of speed. But we are being carried—we do not walk—and even such exercise as horseback riding is too much for this generation.

I think the girls have rather the best of it, as far as games go. Tennis is still played by its enthusiastic lovers, although there are great rivalries even in this—real professional events. Golf, also, is in danger of becoming too professional, though it still has its ardent prestige among the people who think and who enjoy it as a sure method of forgetting cares.

But golf, even, has its critics—for have you not heard of the "golf widows" and their lonely plaint?

I hope the rising generation will take its amusements more practically, that baseball enthusiasts will play ball, that boxers will box, and the general idea of life will be to do things for exercise and amusement, rather than sit and look on while others do all the work and have all the fun and glory of the play.

Keep the Spirit

In the great game of life it is those who join in and take part in whatever is going on, of good and for good, I mean—these are the men and women who count! There is a limit to what can be learned by looking on.

For every professional ball game, there ought to be a thousand non-professional ball games, each with its eager players.

Even in dancing, the most ancient of the arts and most universal of the amusements, has begun to have its few professional and many onlookers.

It is a pity for our young folks to give up dancing, and so far it doesn't seem probable that they will, but there are some indications that they will leave a good many of the fancy steps to the professionals. They should retain all that is best in dancing, leaving nothing of the really beautiful to someone else to do, while they look on.

Do not let us give up to the professionalization of everything. It means the giving over of even the joys and embellishments of life to the spirit of money-making. Let not the world commercialize its art, its play and its joys.

A New Sect in Paris

PARIS, Oct. 3.—"Do nothing."

"Think nothing."

"Make your mind an absolute blank."

These are the axioms of eternal youth, according to Grand Apostolate Pruji Ix, founder and high priest of Pentinl, "religion of the perfect-sphere" — whatever that may mean—and very latest and newest of the queer faiths and creeds which are perpetually popping up in Paris.

Whether Pruji's philosophy put the ix in kick in, at the moment of writing, not yet fully established. The new religion, however, already boasts forty or fifty faithful adherents, who live in a tent colony on a lonely part of the Brittany coast and run about clad in potato sacks.

"It really ought to be skins," he said, wistfully, "but they are too expensive, and we have not been able to find any wild beasts around our camp."

Some complaints have been registered with the police by neighbors of the camp who claim that the sacks may have been originally intended for potatoes, but are more the size of peanut bags.

The police reply has been that France is a land of personal liberty and that as long as the Pentinlse don't parade sackless around the neighboring villages it is immaterial whether they wear 'em or not on their own private property.

NOT TO ONE OF THE LEAST OF THESE

By Dr. Charles Fleischer

NOT like a prize fight between Dempsey and Carpentier is the conflict between Attorney-General Daugherty and Samuel Gompers, president of the American Federation of Labor.

Nevertheless, this fight has at least as large a national and world-wide significance. For the stakes are human souls.

The attorney-general, according to the news dispatches, announces what he calls a "reconstruction" camp for federal prisoners serving their first term.

Present plans provide for making Camp Sherman, Ohio, into a vocational training institution where federal prisoners may be made into good citizens, capable of earning their livelihood when released from prison.

The same day's newspaper reports President Gompers as having written to presidents of local unions and organizers to aid in the fight against the prison contract system in various States.

Convict Labor

As the writer interprets Mr. Gompers' opposition to the prison contract system, his objection is not so much to the contract feature as to the fact that the practically unpaid labor of prisoners is allowed to come unfairly into competition with the wage-paid and unionized labor outside.

The protest ought to be not against their competition, but against their practical enslavement. Neither the State nor the contractor is entitled to the unpaid or underpaid labor of the prisoner.

The fight, which Mr. Gompers, in the name of the average worker ought to carry on, is one for equal pay for equal work within the prison.

Probably a large majority of working people, whether organized or unorganized, would sympathize with such an effort and would cooperate towards its success.

To play into the hands of States and counties and towns which practically rob prisoners of the labor, is not a policy worthy of one who ought consistently to represent both the economic aspirations and the growing human sympathies of the great masses of workers.

It is high time that society in general registered, through official attitude and enabling legislation, our changed attitude towards the prison world.

Moment Has Come

Not that we wish to coddle the wrongdoer or to put a premium upon crime.

But certainly the moment has come when we should announce our change of heart and mind towards the imprisoned wrongdoer, and to place our emphasis accordingly upon the method of his treatment.

This the attorney-general evidently intends to do, according to his proclaimed intention of "reconstructing" prisoners serving their first term.

The purely punitive method of penology in the past does not represent either the ethics of the psychology of our day, with its more intelligent sympathy and its justified hope of the social reclamation of the imprisoned.

Our sympathies are keener, because we know now the varied influence of heredity, environment and miseducation, which give all of us a share of responsibility in such warping of character as results in criminality.

Not a Hopeless Enemy

Also we have learned, from our deeper insight into personality and motives, that a prisoner is by no means a hopeless enemy of society; and that, with proper treatment, well-paid work, and other wise appeal, self-respect and self-direction to constructive ends can, in an increasing number of cases, be won.

At any rate, such must be the spirit and faith of a democratic society towards its stumbling, straying members.

Even if they have fallen, it is our function to stretch forth the strong hand which will help them to rise; and, if they are weak, to enable them to stand straight and to learn to walk steadily.

Not to stir maudlin sentimentality, which is worse than useless, but to aid him in seriously and responsibly pondering this situation, the reader is referred to that exquisitely insightful teaching of Jesus, referring to the failure of helpfulness to the prisoner:

"Inasmuch as ye did it NOT to one of the least of these, ye did it NOT to me."

ORIGIN OF ELEPHANT BASED ON FOSSILS

By Garrett P. Serviss

In your answer to a question concerning the mammoth you say it appears that they originated in southern Asia or Africa and spread northward. Would it not be just as likely that they originated above the Arctic Circle and spread southward? Everything seems to prove that the earth was once a molten mass, the surface of which gradually cooled and hardened. This cooling must have started around the North and South poles. Therefore, these regions probably first became suitable for all kinds of life. It seems almost impossible that life first appeared around the equator, when it must be a fact that the climate above the polar circles was very suitable for plant and animal life hundreds and thousands of years before any life could exist around the equator because of the heat.—C. E. J., New York."

THE statement about the probable place of origin of the elephant tribes was based upon paleontological evidence—i. e., evidence derived from fossil remains—and it relates to a time far subsequent to that when the distribution of life upon the earth could have been determined by the subterranean temperature—if, indeed, there ever was such a time.

The question that you raise goes much farther back. But it is doubtful if the beginning of life on the globe occurred before climatic zones had been established, and that could not have taken place as long as the temperature of the crust remained high enough to mask the atmospheric effects of the sun's radiation.

Besides, it is by no means certain that the earth first became cool around the poles. The bald statement that it did is often repeated, but it rests on no convincing reasoning and is not supported by geological evidence. The warm periods that existed around the poles in former ages all fell in times long this side of the epoch when the conduction of heat from the earth's interior could have seriously affected its surface temperature.

An Old Belief

Those periods instead of being a consequence of internal heat, were due to climatic influences in which the solar radiation and the state of the atmosphere were the master agents. Changes of level of the crust would go far to account for alterations of warm and cold periods.

Quite independent, however, of any direct effect of the internal temperature of the earth, many forms of life have evidently been driven back and forth between the limits of the tropical and the frigid zones, by alternations of climate, due perhaps to changes of atmospheric constitution, perhaps to changes of continental level, perhaps to both those causes, or to other causes unknown.

Such forced shiftings certainly occurred in the glacial and interglacial periods. It is possible, then, that many species of animals may have arisen through isolation, in the far North, during the prevalence of warm polar climates, which species were afterward driven down into temperate or even tropical lands by great glacial invasions.

The Earliest Mammals

An occurrence of that kind of enormous importance in historical geology seems to have come about early in the Tertiary period. You will find an authoritative account of it in Professor Richard Swann Lull's "Organic Evolution" and his Yale lecture on "The Rules of Life." Briefly summed up, it is about as follows: The earliest of the mammals (the race to which mankind belongs) co-existed with the gigantic reptiles called dinosaurs. But these archaic mammals failed to develop much, possibly on account of the dominance of the dinosaurs. With the opening of the Eocene period, however, an incursion of other mammals began, coming from the North, from "either a circumpolar land or the northern part of what now is Asia.

There these new mammals "underwent their primal evolution and were endowed with the highest potentialities along the directions wherein the archaic mammals failed." Climatic oscillation in the North drove them South along the three continental radii formed by America, Europe and Africa, and Asia and the East Indies.

This incursion was not made all at once, but in "a series of drives," until the invaders became "established in their kingdom."
